After two warnings 'Squeaky' ousted from court

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme, at her arraignment for attempted murder of President Ford, was ousted from federal court Thursday when she demanded justice for redwood trees and told the judge: "The gun is pointed, your honor."

The red-robed Miss Fromme, 26, a disciple of mass murderer Charles Manson, demanded to speak despite the judge's warning that she might prejudice her chance for a fair trial.

"This is more important to me at this time," Miss Fromme said in a clear, calm voice over a courtroom microphone. "I'm the one that has to sit in the cell and worry about it."

After a second warning from U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride, she launched her rambling dissertation on redwood trees.

"There is an army of young people and children who want to clean up this earth, the redwood trees," she began.

The judge interrupted. She went on: "I want you to order the corps of government engineers to buy up the parks . . . You have jurisdiction over the redwood trees . . . The important part is the redwood trees."

"The gun is pointed, your honor," she said firmly as the judge tried to silence her. "The gun is pointed. Whether it goes off is up to you."

The judge then ordered her removed from court.

Leaving quietly in the escort of a marshal who grasped her arm, Miss Fromme said cheerfully: "I hope I wasn't rude." The judge assured her she wasn't, and he said he would do everything he could to have her tried in 60 to 90 days.

Miss Fromme is the first person to be tried on the charge of attempted murder of the President, a charge enacted after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Conviction carries a maximum life sentence.

Miss Fromme was clad in the red "nun's robe" she has worn in honor of her jailed leader Manson. She waived reading of the indictment at her arraignment moments before her outburst.

Her federal public defender, E. Richard Walker, asked for more time before entering a plea, and a hearing was set for Sept. 19.

Another hearing was set for next Tuesday on Walker's request for reduction of Miss Fromme's bail, now set at a million. He also asked that a publicity "gag" order on Miss Fromme be lifted so she can speak freely to the news media.

The red-haired, freckle-faced Miss Fromme was seized by Secret Service agents last Friday after she pointed a .45-caliber semiautomatic pistol at Ford from a distance of only two feet as he walked near the state capitol.

An agent wrested the weapon from her. Authorities said there were four live cartridges in the chamber.

During Miss Fromme's courtroom appearance, two of her sister Manson disciples sat in the front row of the spectator section. They were also clad in red.

Sandra Good, Miss Fromme's roommate, wore a floor-length hooded red dress identical to Miss Fromme's uniform. Her friend, Susan "Heather" Murphy, wore a red blouse and red bandana tied around her head.

The women have said their red garb symbolizes "the blood of the sacrifice," an apparent reference to Manson whom they frequently idealize as a Christ-like figure. He is serving a life sentence at San Quentin Prison for the 1969 murder of actress Sharon Tate and others.

Miss Fromme's ejection from court was reminiscent of Manson's trial, when he and three women codefendants were repeatedly ousted for unruly behavior. They listened to most of their trial on loudspeakers from nearby holding cells.

At one point in Thursday's proceeding, Judge MacBride referred to Miss Fromme as "a high-risk defendant," a term objected to by Walker.

"She's still innocent until proven guilty," the public defender told reporters later. "High risk, to me, means some kind of criminal person. She's only been charged."

Outside the courtroom, Miss Good, 30, told reporters: "The court's proceeding today shows the court is interested in if someone did something, rather than why. The why — it needs to be explained. Certain problems need to be explained."

"If they are not explained, she (Miss Fromme) said the gun is pointed," Miss Good said. She added whether she thought that statement was a threat, Miss Good abruptly turned and walked away.

Earlier, Miss Good said "People's Court" has marked for a assassination scores of business executives whose firms allegedly polluted the environment.

The Manson women have devoted all their time in recent months to their own personal anti-pollution campaign strategy shadowed by overtones of violence.

Miss Good gave The Associated Press a list of 74 names of persons she said were marked for death. She identified them as executives mainly in the power, lumber, oil, food and chemical industries.

However, Miss Good has not said she plans to kill any of them herself. She told an AP reporter earlier, "Just because I say your house is going to burn down doesn't mean I'm going to light the fire."

Persons on 'death list' taken aback

HOUSTON — Most of the eight Houston residents named in an alleged assassination list revealed by a former roommate of Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, said Thursday they are puzzled as to why their names are included.

Fromme, a member of the Charles Manson "family," is charged in California with trying to shoot President Ford. A former roommate of Fromme, Sandra Good, said the list contains more than 100 pages of names of employees of companies which her group believes are spoiling the earth.

Six of the Houston residents are connected in some way with Tenneco, Inc., or one of its subsidiaries.

Local residents on the list are: Wilton E. Scott, president and chief executive of Tenneco, Inc.; Simon Askin, executive vice president of Tenneco; Harold Daniels, another Tenneco vice president; Conrad Collier, former director of public relations and advertising for Tenneco Realty, Inc., a subsidiary of Tenneco; Omar Simonds Jr., president of Tenneco Realty, Inc.; Charles Webb, senior vice president of Tenneco Realty; Phyllis Blanchard, with the General Foods office here; and Richard Davis, identified only as a Houston oilman.

"I will completely ignore the threats," Scott said. "I won't take any additional protection measure, because although I have a lot of worries, fear of assassination is not one of them."

Scott laughed at the threats, saying he has received several threats against his life in the past and considers them "a part of business life."

Webb said he couldn't understand his name being on the list.

"I can understand why Mr. Scott's on the list, he's the president, but I'm only a real estate man," Webb said.

Collier said, "Those Manson family people are getting nuttier every day. I can't think of any statement I ever made concerning them."

A Tenneco spokesman also expressed puzzlement as to why the names were included but added "Those names are available through annual reports and various business directories."

Capt. B. G. Bond, head of the Houston police criminal intelligence division, said there is no evidence that any of the Manson group is operating in this area. Bond said he has been in contact with company representatives concerning those named on the death list. Bond declined to comment on any investigation of the case.

A General Foods spokesman said Blanchard has not been to California and has no relatives there. But the company has warehouses in California and Blanchard's job involves routing shipments there.

Education graduates still getting hired

Education graduates from Texas A&M University have minimal unemployment, but the situation could get worse.

A report from A&M's Placement Center indicates a two per cent unemployment figure for Texas. It says most new teaching jobs will be found in small and medium-size school districts.

Educational Placement Coordinator J. Malon Southerland said there is a surplus of teachers in social studies, history and biology. "Indications are that there will be for several years," he said.

According to a phone survey by Dr. Frank W. R. Hubert, dean of education, and Southerland, public schools are having difficulty in locating teachers of industrial education, earth-life science and math.

Southerland said that of 757 registrants with the A&M service, 45 indicated they consider themselves unemployed. 21 of the 45 are in Bryan and College Station.

"This is not peculiar," Southerland said. "Because of their individual situations, they are seeking teaching positions in Bryan and College Station, which has a very glutted job market."

Eight of the 45 are from out-of-state.

"Without these two categories, two per cent in Texas are without jobs," Southerland said. "From our point of view, this is very good."
