

Gramm hails land-use defeat

Ag, industry take stand

An A&M economist has hailed the defeat of the Federal Land-use Planning Bill as the result of an united effort between the nation's industrial and agricultural leaders.

Dr. Philip Gramm, on leave from A&M told the 25th Annual State Meeting of the Texas Soil and Water Conservation District Directors on Wednesday in Ft. Worth that the defeat shows what can be done when two American entities take a stand against growing federal control.

"Land-use jurisdiction has historically been left in the hands of county and city governments and that is where it should remain," Gramm said.

He said land-use controls would be impossible on a national basis and that the government lacked the ability to implement such a program, anyway.

Gramm asked the group how the federal government could effectively plan the use of every portion of land in America when it has clearly demonstrated an inability to deliver mail, enforce laws and maintain the integrity of the purchasing power of its currency.

"Our forefathers came to America to escape government control and federal land-use control," he said, pointing out that land-use planning was in practice in Europe during the Colonial period.

"Private ownership of land," Gramm said, "underlies the U.S. Constitution, our legal system and customs. It is a new and revolutionary idea without which America could not have grown and prospered."

Gramm told the group that the federal government should not impose "the very kind of system that our forefathers came to America to escape."

"Centralized land-use planning is an old tried and rejected idea which has never worked in history and which is worked effectively nowhere in the world today," he said.

'Presidential decision seemed to matter little'

WASHINGTON — U.S. intelligence agencies ignored a presidential order revoking a plan authorizing illegal domestic spying, Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Frank Church said Tuesday.

"The decision of the President seemed to matter very little," said Church, D-Idaho.

He said that the CIA had illegally opened mail before the so-called Huston plan was approved by then-President Richard Nixon. The Huston plan authorized what Church said were illegal wiretaps, mail openings and burglaries.

Five days later Nixon yielded to objections from then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and then-Atty. Gen. John Mitchell and revoked the plan. However, the burglaries and mail openings continued, said Church.

White House aide Tom Charles Huston testified the intelligence agencies — not the White House — drew up the plan which is generally referred to by his last name.

Huston said he endorsed the plan because he thought it was needed to curb rising domestic violence.

Such violence still exists, Huston said, pointing to the two apparent attempts in recent days to kill President Ford. But he said the disclosures of the Watergate period have convinced him that although it involves a serious risk, intelligence activities inside the United States must remain within the limits of the law.

Huston has testified he was also under the impression that neither Nixon nor President Lyndon B. Johnson knew of the CIA's Operation Chaos nor the FBI's Operation Conintelpro which were aimed against dissident groups.

"The big mistake I made was that I assumed the integrity of the people involved in these operations was such . . . that these type, enormous powers would be used in very limited, narrow circumstances," Huston said.

Feds begin investigation of lost letter

The Justice Department has launched a criminal investigation into the destruction of a threatening letter that Lee Harvey Oswald delivered to the Dallas FBI office shortly before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

A knowledgeable department source said Tuesday the matter has been turned over to the department's criminal division.

The FBI, under orders from Director Clarence M. Kelley, is conducting its own probe of the case.

Oswald, the accused assassin who was shot and killed by Jack Ruby before facing trial, reportedly threatened to blow up a Dallas police station unless the FBI stopped trying to find him.

The letter containing the threat was delivered to the Dallas FBI office in early November 1963, and reportedly was destroyed soon after Kennedy was assassinated Nov. 22.

Chicken fried steak like you wouldn't believe.

The 3-C Corral serves a chicken fried steak like you wouldn't believe. We start with 1/3 pound of round steak — without a speck of "extender." We double dip each steak in our own batter, fry it to a golden brown and deliver it to your table hot and ready to eat. The chicken fried plate also includes a generous serving of french fries, fresh green salad and a roll.

And the price is about the same you've been paying for a pre-breaded steak: $2⁹⁵

If you like chicken fried steak (and nearly every Aggie does) you'll find a home at the 3-C Corral.
