Texas

THE PROCEDURE EMPLOYED to select Dr. Lorene Rogers as president of the University of Texas "must not be allowed to stand or to continue," the Travis County legislative delegation said Thursday.

Regents chose Dr. Rogers on a 5-3 vote even though a student-faculty advisory committee had refused on four separate occasions to recommend her.

A joint statement in Austin of the four House members and Sen. Lloyd Doggett, also of Austin, said they were "deeply concerned... by the apparent use of taxpayers' monies to circumvent the established budgetary process of the university in an apparent attempt to punish those among the teaching faculty who had opposed the president."

The faculty members have discussed unionization with representatives of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT), a faculty member says.

Joe Oppenheimer, associate professor of government, said faculty members signed a sheet indicating their interest, and most of those who signed volunteered to help organize the 1,600-member faculty.

TEXAS LEGISLATORS have forgotten an important detail in the rewritten state Constitution: to name a "seat of government." They made a provision stating "the legislature is to meet at the seat of government unless otherwise provided by law." Austin is not mentioned in the rewritten document.

A MAYOR CANNOT SERVE as county chairman of a political party. The decision was made in reply to Hidalgo County Criminal Dist. Atty. Oscar McInnis by state Atty. Gen. John Hill.

THE SON OF H. L. HUNT personally ordered the wiretapping of his father's aides but insists he was unaware of the illegality of the request. Bunker and Herbert Hunt are facing a six-count indictment for wiretapping in Lubbock.

THE CARRILLO BROTHERS of Duval County have been accused of causing the "disappearance" of certain Benavides school district records. The income tax trail continues.

BOB BULLOCK CONTENDS his card files on political contributions is not the work of public employees. He does concede that his office employees are compiling a massive clip file on state politicians.

THE 1975 TAX REDUCTION should not be extended into 1976, Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board recommended. He added that Congress would be courted another round of inflation if it enacted new spending programs. Burns also said that unemployment was "mostly voluntary" because of government supports.

Council grants phone rate hike

By JERRY NEEDHAM

The College Station City Council in a surprise move Wednesday night, passed an ordinance granting General Telephone Company of the Southwest an increase in local rate charges.

The ordinance set new rates which, along with miscellaneous service charges, will produce the $219,000 additional revenue which College Station and Bryan had earlier agreed to grant to the phone company.

Councilman Homer Adams voted against the ordinance saying, "I don't think the phone company is entitled to this increase at all."

The new rates are scheduled to become effective at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Under the ordinance, the rate for a residence one-party line will rise from the present $6.50 to $6.75. Under General Telephone's original request for $1,073,193, the rate would have gone to $9.65.

The ordinance states that "General (Telephone) has failed in its burden of proof to show that any increase in rate is justified." Even so, the council approved the new rates "in hopes of avoiding costly litigation and in hopes that General will upgrade its telephone service to a reasonable level."

An apparent conflict exists between the passage of the ordinance and a temporary restraining order issued against General Telephone by 85th Dist. Court Judge W. C. Davis on Tuesday.

"The court order restrains General Telephone from collecting rates which are not fixed by the plaintiffs (Bryan and College Station)," College Station City Attorney Neeley Lewis said Friday morning.

Since the ordinance was fixed by one of the plaintiffs, General Telephone can begin to collect the new rates in College Station on Wednesday, Lewis said.

The Bryan Council would have to pass a similar ordinance for General Telephone to effectively realize $219,000 under the College Station ordinance, said Bryan City Manager Lou Odle this morning.

"There is a possibility that we may pass a similar ordinance next week at a special meeting of the council," Odle said. He said that meeting has not yet been called.

B. A. Erwin, division manager of General Telephone, said Thursday night that the phone company had no prior notification of the proposed ordinance.

"They (College Station) are basing their request on the same $219,000 figure which they offered us last week and we found it unacceptable at that time," Erwin said Friday morning.

Academic Council meets

Dunn argues against foreign student limits

By KARLA MOURITSEN
Campus Editor

Appearing before the Academic Council yesterday afternoon, Student Body President Jeff Dunn argued against three proposals involving the admission of international students into Texas A&M University.

"I am against all three of these proposals," Dunn said. "The international students were not consulted or notified of the proposals; the students at A&M had no input on any level; I question the use of the English proficiency test for admission, and I do not want to decrease enrollment on a discriminatory basis."

"We are not trying to limit international student enrollment," said University President Jack Williams. Williams said the proposal is designed only to eliminate unqualified international students.

Williams said that more international students than U.S. residents return home because of scholastic deficiency.

The first of the three proposals recommended that the overall grade point average (GPA) for undergraduate international students transferring from colleges and universities in the United States be raised from 2.0 to 2.5. This requirement covers each of the last two semesters of attendance.

"This will mean a better chance of success for the student," said Dean of Admissions Edwin H. Cooper. He said the measure will also reduce the overall student population.

Arguments arose as to why this proposal should apply only to international students. Data was not available as to how many residents would be affected so the motion was tabled until the next meeting.

Another proposal recommended that all international students must score at least 550 on the TOEFL (an English proficiency test) or have a grade of C in each of two regular university-level English courses and have successfully completed an English proficiency test administered by the university.

"When a student comes from a foreign country, under this proposal, he will not know if he will be admitted until he takes the exam," Dunn said. "If he should flunk, he would either have to go back to his country or enroll full-time in the English Language Institute, which would take an extra semester and more money."

George Kunze, dean of the graduate college, said that the international students had provided input into the development of the English proficiency test.

"We discussed this matter for at least a year, and there were international students on that committee," he said.

The Academic Council approved that proposal and another stating that international students seeking entrance to the graduate college must present an acceptable Graduate Record Examination (GRE) score.

In the past, students attempting to raise their GRE or waiting to receive their GRE score had been admitted as special students.

"There were graduate students admitted that actually lacked the credentials," said Kunze.

Some without roommates, but . . .

Everyone's got a home for now

By CATHY RANDALL
Battalion Staff Writer

Now that the registration dust has settled, it appears that everyone has found a home.

This year, anyway. The consequences of the housing crunch, brought on by a 3,784 increase in student enrollment, still remain unresolved.

At least 150 students were unable to find roommates this semester and are paying up to $250 a month to live in an apartment by themselves, Karen Switzer, Student Development Coordinator, said Wednesday.

"What it amounts to," Switzer said, "is that people panicked at the last minute and leased apartments without finding roommates."

"There was a rumor going around that the town was completely filled," she said. "But one thing is clear: there are still places left."

Switzer suggested that students use the roommate service provided by the Student Services Office in the YMCA building.

The students who moved into Scandia III are still living on a construction site. Twenty of the 198 units are occupied.

"They told us the TV cable would be installed in two weeks," Scandia resident Sharon Davis said Wednesday. "That was two months ago."

She was told by the apartment manager that a phone could not be installed until a group of five buildings were completed.

Davis said she pays $175 a month for the one-bedroom, unfurnished apartment. She receives no construction discount.

Some apartment complexes offer a reduction in rent during construction because of inconvenience to tenants from unfinished facilities.

When Davis complained to the management, she was told that she could get out of her lease. There were plenty more to take her place, one of the managers told her.

There are now 3,677 apartment units in College Station, not counting 4,700 university-owned units.

City Planner Al Mayo said Thursday that in 1971 there were 1,200 commercial units and 800 university units in the city.

As far as more housing for next fall is concerned, Mayo said he knows of only two complexes being constructed now, Scandia III and Taos, both on Anderson Street.

Last month several prospective developers contacted the city about building additional complexes, Mayo said, but so far none have indicated any further interest.

"Everyone thinks this is such a good market because of the demand," Mayo explained, "but actually it is not."

He said this area was a high risk to developers because it was a student market, and therefore not a lucrative market.

"You can only push up the rent so much when you're dealing with students," he said. Houston or Dallas provide a higher money market than this area, he added.

He said that during the summer some complexes have a 40 per cent vacancy rate since most students rent apartments for a nine-month period.

Another problem for developers is that most of College Station is surrounded by flood plains.

Most of the growth in College Station has taken place between Highway 30 and Wellborn Road.

The continuing growth of College Station depends on the growth at A&M, Mayo said.

On Thursday President Williams announced a Board of Regents meeting for November to consider limiting University enrollment.

"They keep saying they are going to limit enrollment," Mayo said. "They once said 25,000 was the limit, and then added the west campus to the drawing board."

"I don't think they have any idea of the unbelievable potential at A&M," Mayo said. "They could build the west campus the same size as the present one and then add another the same size from here to the Brazos."

The University owns most of the land from Wellborn Road to the Brazos River.

"They (University administration) could stop the growth, depending on their policies," he said.

"When they changed the policy a few years ago to include civilians and women, the rapid growth made them go out of their minds," Mayo said.

Mayo predicted that College Station's population would go over 40,000 in two years. The population is currently estimated between 34,000 and 35,000.

Mayo said there has been an increase in the number of single-family units being built, making a "pretty healthy balance" between apartments and houses.

There are 538 existing duplexes in College Station, 220 mobile homes and 2,900 single family units, he said.

"But you had better start looking for a place now," Karen Switzer said.

Unfinished apartments

Local builders are having a difficult time keeping up with the increasing local population. The unplanned for increase in student population has left many apartment builders with unfinished buildings when they could use them the most.
