Ags' perfect mark on trial

Texas A&M places its undefeated record and six-game home-field winning streak on the line tomorrow before a regional television audience as the Fighting Illini pay a visit to Aggieland. Kickoff is set for 12:50 p.m.
Illinois stands even on the year with a win over Iowa and then fal-

Illinois punter Phil Vierneisel set to send one flying. Vierneisel could be crucial in Saturday's meeting at ously and has a 1-5 record against them.

The Illini of Coach Bob Blackman bring with them a more than capable offense. They scored 20 points against a Missouri team that held Alabama to just a field goal, and was the number two defense in the country.

Blackman has seven returnees to his offensive squad off a 6-4-1 sea-and split end with the likes of John Smalzer and Jeff Chrystal returning.

The defense is entirely another matter as only three starters return. The left side of the line appears secure with end Dean March and tackle John DiFelicantonio manning the bulwarks although top backups are injured. This duo is two-thirds of Illinois' returning defensive lettermen. The third is halfback Bruce Beaman.

Illinois lines up in a 4-4 defensive formation with only three defensive backs. The Illini key against the run

The Aggies emerged unscathed from the LSU game and will line up in virtually the same way as last week. Pat Thomas, who has been having ankle problems, will be a probable starter.

The previously-maligned A&M offense came alive and now seems as potent as all pre-season expectations indicated. It will be interesting to see how A&M attacks the virtual eight man line of the Illini. The green defensive backfield could have its hands full containing Carl Roaches and Richard Osborne.

The experience of the Aggies versus the inexperience of the Illini will be one of the determining factors of the game.

After such a spectacular win last week the Aggies could be headed for a letdown emotionally. This will be another key to the outcome of the game.

Another feature item is the effect the new NCAA rule concerning the limiting of travel squads to only 48 men will have. This is the first weekend of games to which the rule will be applied. A&M will be suiting up 60 men, a dozen more than the visitors.

but the necessary experience in the linebacker positions is lacking. All four of last year's linebackers left with diplomas.

Despite his defensive handicaps, Blackman maintains an air of optimism. "We sincerely feel we won't face an opponent that we aren't capable of beating," he said.

The Aggies will be wearing the tag of opponent this week and will be carrying a lot of momentum into the contest after their party in Louisiana last week.

A&M now is leading the nation in total defense after two games, surmounting an average of 98 yards per outing.

Aggie coach Emory Bellard makes a point. Could it be symbolic?
