Local funeral director Russ Hillier, whose father, Charles, died Friday, had good words about the service.
"Last week (early October) we had an occasion to use Sherrill's service — my father, who's 83, had a massive coronary.

"We called Sherrill and the hospital. In 6 p.m. traffic, it only took them seven minutes to drive two and a half miles.
"The EMT (emergency medical technician) knew what to do. He even ran the suction machine in the hospital emergency room."

"Sherrill is probably no better or worse than his predecessors," Trowbridge said. He added that the public will get no better service than it's willing to pay for.
Tomorrow: A look at Sherrill's equipment and personnel and efforts by local government to improve the service.

New York governor requests aid bill

WASHINGTON — New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey told Congress Tuesday that unless a bill to aid deficit-ridden New York City is on President Ford's desk by early November, both the city and state will go into default.
Carey told a House economic stabilization subcommittee that the Ford administration's reluctance to help New York indicates the White House "is content to allow the fate of 17 million Americans and the economy of our nation to twist slowly in the wind..."

Carey testified one day after the New York state fiscal watchdog committee for New York City approved an austerity plan that will cut the city's budget by $724 million over the next three years and slash thousands more municipal workers from the payroll.

The governor told the subcommittee today that "the entire world is watching to see if the Congress of the United States will prove, once again, that our government can take care of its people."

Carey said that if federal help is not forthcoming, the city will default in early December "and then the state of New York, its vital agencies, many of its school districts and many of its local units of government will be forced into default soon afterwards."

The state has run out of re- sources to help the city, he said. Unless Congress can pass a bill and have it on the President's desk by early November, "Any help you might consider will be too late to be of consequence," he added.

Carey, head of the Emergency Financial Control Board, startled other board members Monday night when he told a meeting of the City Club that 55,000 jobs would be eliminated by 1978.
