I'm not the Quarterback

In just 32 short days the 1975-76 edition of the Texas Aggie basketball team will make its debut in front of the home folks. From what I've seen the past couple of days it could prove to be very interesting.

The Aggies are blessed with senior talent and leadership and a crop of freshmen that any coach would like to have.

If the Aggies have any weakness other than obvious lack of experience it's that they don't have an experienced "big man" over 6-6 to go along with their super speed.

There will be more new wrinkles in SWC basketball this year than in a five year old prune.

Squads have been limited to ten men. Not good, says Aggie boss Shelby Metcalf. "I really don't like that rule because I feel like a player can make a contribution even when he doesn't play. I think Joe Arciniega made a terrific contribution although he didn't play that much," Metcalf said.

Another new change will be in the way the Southwest Conference basketball TV schedule is set up.

In the past the TV schedule has been designated before the season started. This made it really easy for the TV folks but it also made for some very dull games from mid-season on that didn't mean anything.

This season only the first five games are set with the last five to be wild card games. The Aggie game against Texas Tech in Lubbock on January 17th will be on the tube with the Aggie-Arkansas battle the following Saturday in Fayetteville, a good bet for a wild card game.

This is one of the best things for SWC basketball since the hoop. Now late in the season instead of playing golf while two bottom teams are playing, fans will stay home to see the top teams play. Exposure throughout the season will help the SWC and should boost attendance at the SWC tourney.

It should be a wild season with no fewer than five teams mentioned as championship material. Some say the Ags will repeat. Some feel that the University of Houston will walk away with the title. Houston coach Guy Lewis thinks Texas Tech should be considered as the favorite. Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton thinks Houston should be favored and Metcalf thinks Baylor could be the team to beat.

I'm glad everyone agrees. While half of the Aggie team has never played a second of college basketball they will be given the opportunity to learn early in the season as they have one of the toughest tournaments schedules in history.

They lead off in the Jayhawk Classic in Lawrence Kansas with Kansas, LaSalle and Yale. The Aggies open in that one with LaSalle who won 24 games last season.

The comes the Louisville tournament in Louisville, Kentucky with one of the nation's top teams, Louisville. Seattle will also be there along with small college power Kentucky State. The Ags have yet to get an opening round foe.

Next is the Bluebonnet tourney in Houston. The Cougars and Aggies will be in this one with Houston Baptist and San Francisco. San Francisco was the number one recruiting team in the nation last year and Houston is always tough in their own pit.

The Aggies will open with San Francisco. Coach Metcalf found this out when he was talking with the Frisco coach on the telephone. "Houston let them know who their first round game was with but they didn't let us know, I guess they only had one stamp."

Metcalf went on about how his Aggies always seem to draw the toughie in the opening round while the Cougars have the light one. "That Guy Lewis is just the luckiest man in the world. For the last eight years he's called me on the phone and we've flipped to see who plays who and he's won all of them. The closest I ever came to winning was one year when the coin landed on its end and we had to flip over."

That's Shelby. Yes, basketball is near.

Laker star suspended indefinitely

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Gail Goodrich, a star guard holding out for more money, is under suspension by the Los Angeles Lakers who have filled his spot on the roster with 7-foot Jim McDaniel, who doesn't play in the backcourt.

Goodrich, who was named to the National Basketball Association's all-star team after the 1973-74 season, and owner Jack Kent Cooke are reportedly about $100,000-a-year apart in negotiations.

Larry Fliesher, who represents Goodrich, has been quoted as saying, "This is the worst contract dispute I ever had."

Although exact figures aren't announced, Goodrich was believed to have earned $150,000 from the Lakers last season when they posted their worst season since moving from Minneapolis to Los Angeles.

Cooke reportedly is offering between $175,000 to $200,000 for the current season. The left-handed former UCLA star wants about $100,000 more than that for his services.

Sooners picked over rival Oklahoma State

Associated Press

NEW YORK — When Rodgers and Hammerstein wrote their little ditty about college football, they didn't call it Oklahoma State. Instead, they sang the praises of Oklahoma, spreading the name across the sheet music like a 28-game winning streak.

"Ooooooooooooooohlahoma," was the cry then, and it still is, overshadowing the fact that the Cowboys from Oklahoma State were a good football team last year with a victory in the Fiesta Bowl, and are a very solid football team again this season.

Oklahoma State's dilemma is more than the fact that rival Oklahoma is the best team in the state and in the conference. It's that in 1974, Oklahoma was the No. 1 team in the land, stretching from sea to shining sea.

Sooners Coach Barry Switzer does, for one. He says Oklahoma State, 5-2 after a 35-19 victory over Kansas last Saturday, is "one of the better offensive football teams in the Big 8."

Oklahoma State, ranked No. 19, is a pretty good football team, but Oklahoma, college football's Mr. America last year, is now rated No. 2. So like we said before, who's gonna notice pretty? . . . Oklahoma 31, Oklahoma State 14.

Indiana at No. 1 Ohio State: The only way the Hoosiers can score on the top-ranked Buckeyes would be to slip a basketball and hoop onto the field . . . Ohio State 52, Indiana 0.

No. 3 Nebraska at No. 12 Missouri: Nebraska looks like the only team around which can take the 0 — as in no losses — out of Ooooooohlahoma. Until then, the Cornhuskers will have to be satisfied with showing Missouri how . . . Nebraska 28, Missouri 14.

No. 4 Southern California at California: After beating Notre Dame at South Bend, the Trojans will have fun in the California sun. It will be the Bears who get burned . . . Southern Cal 27, California 14.

No. 6 Alabama at Mississippi State: The Bulldogs remember last season's 35-0 loss to the Crimson Tide. Unfortunately for them, Alabama remembers how to do it again . . . Alabama 35, Mississippi State 0.

No. 7 Michigan at Minnesota: Minnesota, which lost last year to the Wolverines 49-0, is an improved football team . . . Michigan 49, Minnesota 7.

No. 8 Texas at Southern Methodist: A case of differing perspectives. Southern Methodist is in the hard part of its schedule; Texas is taking another week off . . . Texas 42, Southern Methodist 10.

No. 9 Penn State at No. 14 Maryland: The list of pretenders to Penn State's Eastern college football throne gets larger each week. Boston College, West Virginia and now Maryland . . . Penn State 23, Maryland 14.

No. 10 Arizona State at Utah: Sun Devils get a soft initiation in the Top 1 . . . Arizona State 27, Utah 0.
