Coke Building crowded by waiting students

At 8 a.m. Monday the students came. They stood in lines that wove in and out of the doorways of the Coke Building waiting to get copies of their schedules, fee slips or both.

"About 500 envelopes filled this box," said a worker for the Fiscal Office, indicating a box of mail stamped "RETURN TO SENDER." "And the students who came for them were really surly." All the envelopes contained schedules and fee slips.

The fiscal office had mailed the fee slips to the students' local addresses. "This is normal procedure for the spring semester," said Clark Diebel,

A&M comptroller.

"If we don't have an address we (the Fiscal Office) go to the Housing Office (Student Locator) and use the address listed there. Sometimes if the addresses are unavailable we call the student out of class or ask the University Police to find him," said Diebel.

In the time between the Friday of dead week and the beginning of drop-add, students' fee slips and schedules have been prepared, processed, mailed, returned, and re-mailed to proper addresses if possible. But many students were still without those yellow carbon copies as classes started.

"According to the receipt book number, we've run 650 schedules," said a Registrar's Office worker. Her counterpart in the Fiscal Office said that they had made 800 copies of fee slips.

"Some of the students have lost their fee slips or schedules. Others' parents kept the fee slips as a record of paying, not aware that their children needed both of the yellow sheets," said another Fiscal Office worker.

While all this copying was being done, grumblings came from students who had to pay $1 for their "already posted" mailings.

No one wants to take the blame for the situation. The Fiscal Office is blaming the Post Office.

"We had the billings all metered and forwarded the Friday before finals," said Allan Madeley, faculty mail service manager. "But there were some students who were bound to have left for home before receiving their bills."

"It seems like half the students change addresses between semesters and don't tell anybody," said Don Carter, associate registrar. He added that "lots of students" have come to records to check grades.

"Students should list their new addresses at the Housing Office before the twelfth day of class," said Diebel.

MSC access limited by Lamar street removal

Access to the University Center by way of Military Walk has been hampered by continuing campus construction. Lamar street is currently being demolished and access to the Memorial Student Center is now limited to the far east by the Trigon and far west by Caine Hall.

The concrete mall in front of Hart Hall has been totally fenced off and cannot be crossed by bicycle.

The Geology Building is blocked from the front and should be approached from the side or back, said Charles Brunt, manager of construction.

There are some classrooms that can only be entered from the front, he said.

Other campus construction projects include demolition of a number of barrack-type College View married housing units, a sidewalk going in on the east side of Lubbock street, painting of temporary buildings that serve as research and office sites, additional tennis courts, completion of renovation of the new police quarters in the old engineering extension building.

"We're using Latex paint which is the easiest to clean off," said Karl Cogar, a scheduler-planner II with the maintenance department.

He recommends that people park upwind of the painting which should take about six weeks.

Brunt also said that students should avoid crane movement in the new building areas, including the Architecture Building, the agriculture complex on the west campus and the science lab and classroom complex. Other buildings under construction consideration are three greenhouses and additions to the sewer treatment plant.

Brunt said that buildings reaching completion are the tower at Easterwood Airport, and the purchasing and storage building.

The wall has reached its height, at least for a while, Brunt said.

Other maintenance will include the renovation of dorm exteriors in the south dorm area, renovation of offices in the Systems Building, installation of hardware in restrooms for handicapped students and completion of the bus stop at the east end of the Forestry Building.

The only new parking lot being constructed is behind the low density dorm area, which will provide an additional 317 parking spaces.

The only road planned for construction is Agronomy Road by the Vet School.

Political file compiled by Senate employe

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Tex. — Two district attorney investigators have scheduled an interview today with a key punch operator about her work on a Fort Worth senator's political file while she was on the Senate payroll.

The woman pleaded with The Associated Press Monday not to reveal her name because it would cost her her job. She said she understood that if she gets a subpoena to appear Friday before the holdover Travis County grand jury investigating Secretary of the Senate Charles Schnabel her name no longer could be kept out of the story, "But it's not fair."

She said she worked nights, holidays and weekends for "six to eight months" punching cards that would feed a computer the names of thousands of persons in the district of former Sen. Don Kennard, D-Fort Worth.

Kennard said, "Everybody had a card file in those days. I came up with the idea that it would expedite things if we could computerize it."

He could not remember how many names were on the file but they numbered in the "thousands."

Different groups in his district could be alerted quickly to issues of importance to them through newsletters sent through the computerized system, he said. All legislators should have it done, he said. Asked if he felt justified in using taxpayers' money for that purpose, he replied: "Oh, sure."

The key punch operator received a state warrant for "about $600 a month" in the mail at Austin Automated Data Service, where she worked, she said.

The Senate had no key punch operators, she said, so Schnabel asked the husband of his secretary, who owns Austin Automated Data Service, if he had someone who would do the work.

She said she had forgotten, if she ever knew, who the senator was. She called her former boss, Vernon Brinkman, after district attorney investigators talked to her recently "and he told me who it was." She said she agreed to talk to the investigators again today.

She said her children, members of her church and others would not understand if her name became linked with the Schnabel case. "My mother will die," she said. Her present employer will fire her, "and I need that job," she said.

But she feels she did nothing wrong. "I actually produced the work I was asked to do. I didn't see anything wrong with it," she said.

"I think I was underpaid, if you want to know the truth," she said. She regrets the work because it took time away from her that could have been spent with her children, she said.

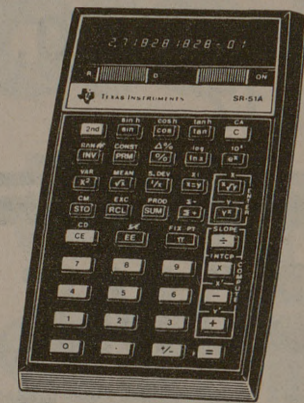

She said she performed the work in 1971 and 1972. She recalls that she worked on it during the Christmas holidays in 1971.

A month earlier, newsmen discovered eight women in the Senate Enrolling and Engrossing Room putting 90,000 names and addresses on automatic typewriter tape for then-Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes. They took the names and addresses from green index cards. Kennard also kept the names of his constituents on green index cards.

The AP has learned that some senators are having key punch operators at the Texas Water Development Board perform the same task for them today through an interagency agreement.
