Reagan, Ford agree . . .

Federal government too powerful

Associated Press
CONCORD, N. H. — When Ronald Reagan uses his mousetrap line or President Ford jokes about the price of government beer, the Republican rivals are aiming at the same target: Washington, and a federal government they agree is too big and powerful.
They differ on what to do about it. But on a good many points, the President and his challenger could trade speeches and go right on talking.
For example:
"Freedom is today misinterpreted by too many to mean the instant equalization of everyone's social and economic situation at the public expense through the machinery of the federal government."
That's Ford, not Reagan.
Or:
"Balancing the budget is like protecting your virtue: you have to learn to say no."
Reagan.
Both candidates are telling the voters that private enterprise, not government, has to produce the jobs to cope with unemployment. Both favor a constitutional amendment to permit prayer in public schools. Both are advocates of nuclear power development.

Reagan favors a constitutional amendment to ban abortions unless the mother's life is at stake; Ford supports a different amendment that would leave that question to the states.
Both advocate a strong national defense — with Reagan suggesting that Ford's ouster of James R. Schlesinger as secretary of defense casts doubt on administration devotion to that cause.
They differ on foreign policy, given Reagan's suspicion of U.S.—Soviet detente.
Question and answer session are the basic format of the Reagan campaign. He calls them Citizens Press Conferences, meaning that voters, not newsmen, are permitted to ask questions.
Ford held one news conference and two question hours during his weekend in New Hampshire. He

Supersonic animal draws visitors to roadside museum

Associated Press
KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Flying to Europe at supersonic speeds aboard the Anglo-French Concorde will cost about $700, but you can board the American SST for just $2. The difference is that the U.S. plane isn't going anywhere.
Displayed to curiosity-seekers like some prehistoric animal, a red, white and blue mockup of the now-scuttled American supersonic transport draws about 9,000 visitors each year to a roadside museum in this central Florida town.
"We get quite a few visitors who were involved in building the SST," museum Director J. E. Jacks said.
"They all feel it's a shame that the program was scrapped."
Congress shelved the American SST program in 1971, in part because of environmentalists' fears the plane would be too noisy and dirty. And the environmentalists objected last week when Transportation Secretary William Coleman approved a 16-month trial for Concorde flights to New York and Washington from London and Paris.
Even as the $60 million Concorde zoom into the United States, aviation buffs can still find artifacts of the American program.
The SST mockup, built by the Boeing Co. of Seattle, as part of the
