Explosion, fire damage building

Two Texas A&M University custodial workers narrowly escaped serious injury last night about 6:30 when a small explosion occurred on the 4th floor of the Oceanography and Meteorology Building.

Harry Davis, College Station fire marshal, said two women were emptying trash from room 403A, an oceanography laboratory. One of them had just finished dumping trash into a plastic garbage container in the hall and had walked only five feet back into the lab when the container exploded.

Both were only shaken up in the incident. Three men who were working in rooms at the other end of the hall heard the blast and attempted to put out a small fire that followed the explosion. The men used four dry-chemical extinguishers but failed to put out the blaze. They then called the College Station Fire Department, which extinguished the fire.

A professor who has been conducting experiments in the lab said a chemical reaction between the trash and some perchloric acid which had been dumped into the container probably caused the explosion and fire. The blaze, if caused by such a reaction, could not have been extinguished with the conventional dry chemical extinguishers, he said.

Damage to the hallway was restricted to nearby walls, the ceiling flooring and a few acoustical vinyl tiles.

Fire!

An explosion and fire in a trash can left this mess on the fourth floor of the Oceanography Building Tuesday night. The fire may have been caused by perchloric acid leaking from containers in the trash.

Psychiatrist says Hearst 'shattered'

Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst was a confused young woman with "a variety of behaviors" and virtually no identity of her own in the weeks after her arrest, says a court-appointed psychiatrist.

Dr. L. J. West, a professor of psychiatry and an expert on prisoner of war torture, spent the entire day Tuesday on the witness stand at Miss Hearst's trial for bank robbery.

Asst. U.S. Atty. David Bancroft, who repeatedly questioned West's interpretations of Miss Hearst's mental state, planned to continue his cross-examination today.

During direct questioning by defense counsel F. Lee Bailey, West portrayed Miss Hearst as a "shattered" survivor of a 19-month ordeal in the terrorist underground.

West said Tuesday that Miss Hearst, who had been given the name "Tania" by her Symbionese Liberation Army captors after she proclaimed her allegiance to the terrorist band and took part in the bank robbery, became "Pearl" for much of her time in the underground.

Miss Hearst testified earlier that SLA member Emily Harris gave her the name "Pearl" after the May 17, 1974, shootout in which six SLA members died in Los Angeles.

West said the heiress had made a "remarkable improvement" in her condition in the past few months but still showed signs of anxiety and the fear for her life that characterized much of her own testimony.

West was one of three psychiatrists appointed by U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter last fall to help determine whether Miss Hearst was competent to stand trial. He spent a total of 23 hours examining the 22-year-old defendant and was called as a witness for the defense.

The other two experts who examined her on behalf of the court were not testified at the trial.

Bancroft attempted Tuesday to discredit West's sympathetic picture of Miss Hearst and elicited the fact the psychiatrist had written the Hearst family months before he ever met the defendant.

West defended his letter to Randolph and Catherine Hearst as "one parent to another," written sometime while Miss Hearst was sought as a fugitive.

"I think I expressed some sympathy and told them they should not despair of their daughter's condition because if she were ever returned to them alive she might be in a condition to be helped and possibly defended," he said.

West and the judge confirmed that the court was aware of the letter prior to West's appointment by Carter to the case.

The prosecution contends Miss Hearst willingly joined her SLA kidnapers, helped them rob a bank and remained with them on her own volition until her capture last Sept. 18.

Miss Hearst contends she cooperated with her kidnapers and desperately wanted them to believe she had joined their terrorist ranks because she felt it was her only means of survival. Any sign of betrayal or lack of commitment, she said, would mean death.

West said she "lived for the moment as a sort of psychological armor" to blot out the pain of being a hostage of the SLA and a fugitive of the law.

The defendant has testified that she was raped by now-dead SLA members Donald "Cinque" De-Freeze and William Wolfe twice in the weeks after her Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping.

She has described surviving SLA member William Harris as a brute who blackened her eye at least four times and who, along with his wife, Emily, kept her in fear after six SLA members died in a shootout in May 1974. The Harrises are now in jail.

During another part of the examination, Bancroft made mention of mentioning that West was a professor at the University of California Los Angeles and that the defendant's mother is a UC regent. Hearst said why the witness had had dinner with the Hearsts and West said "necessary to interview her to gather information on Hearst's background."

Earlier Tuesday, West said Miss Hearst initially could not recall some details of the bank robbery which she is on trial. "It was a dream," he quoted her as saying. She did not remember two robbers who were shot in the event though she had to see their bodies to leave the bank.

Patricia Hearst, imprisoned, still trembles at mention of SLA, he said.

A&M offers Latin

After an absence of many years the formal study of Latin is returning to Texas A&M.

In September the Modern Languages Department will offer 107, an introductory course, said Anne Marie Elmquist, department head.
