

Hearst defense claims evidence illegal

Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's defense attorneys have launched a vigorous assault against the prosecution's case against her, seeking to have it stricken as the product of an illegal search.

The judge predicted the hearing would take at least several hours, interrupting the prosecution's rebuttal testimony and virtually erasing any chance of sending the bank robbery case to the jury by the end of the week.

Today last chance to register to vote

Today is the last day to register to vote in the upcoming city and school elections.

Anyone who has voted in a local election within the last three years need not re-register. Any change of address from the date of the last election should be reported to the tax assessor-collector's office.

Students may register at a booth, operated by Texas A&M Student Government, on the first floor of the Memorial Student Center from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for last-minute registration.

Shark food fishy subject

Consumer attitudes toward shark as a food item is among topics for the 1972 Fisheries Conference March 7-10 at the Quinta Royale Motor Inn in Corona, Calif.

The conference, sponsored by Texas A&M University and the National Fisheries Institute in cooperation with the National Marine Fisheries Service, will include sessions on aquaculture, minced fish, economics and marketing, and genetic technology.

Over 40 papers will be presented on such topics as smoked mullet, the Gulf of Mexico shrimping industry, shellfish poisoning and shrimp aquaculture.

Design historian to speak here

A pioneer in environmental design who also ranks as one of the leading architectural historians will be featured as a visiting centennial professor March 23-24.

Dr. James M. Fitch, professor of architecture and historic preservation at Columbia University will appear as a guest of the College of Architecture and Environmental Design, said Dr. John Garner, spokesman for the college.

Fitch will give a public lecture March 23 at 4 p.m. in the Architecture Building auditorium on "Architecture Worth Saving."

Aggie Players offer fairytale

A Hans Christian Andersen fairytale, "The Emperor's New Clothes," is in rehearsal by the Aggie Players for March 30-31 and April 1-2 performances.

The three-act comedy by Charlotte Chorpenning is presented as the Aggie Players' children's production.

The play will appear in the Budder Center forum nightly at 7 p.m. Admission will be 50 cents for children and $1 per adult.

THE TIDE HAS COME IN

SEXSELLS GALOPES

The 29-page "Tania" manuscript — so called for the revolutionary name Miss Hearst said the SLA gave her — contains some of the defendant's handwriting and outlines her rejection of her family and her conversion to the terrorist doctrines of the SLA. Portions of the document were read to the jury during the trial.

Browning objected to the hearing, saying the defense should have filed the motion to suppress the evidence long ago. Bailey angrily informed the prosecutor that he had been unaware that the legality of the search was in dispute.

Court was recessed 20 minutes early Tuesday to prepare for the hearing. Bailey dashed out to fill a speaking engagement, but his associate, Al Johnson, said, "If the search and seizure were illegal, the evidence derived in that search would be stricken from the record of this case."

The government's chief attorney has been foiled in his attempts to question the defendant's activities from September 1974 until her arrest a year later. He claims she was out "casing banks with the HARRISES," but Miss Hearst refuses to testify about the year.

Browning indicated that he had at least four more rebuttal witnesses, including the manager of a bank in Marysville, Calif., of which a diagram was found in the HARRISES' apartment with Miss Hearst's fingerprints.

The Harris search was disputed because they were arrested outside on the sidewalk near their apartment.

The search of Miss Hearst's apartment is not in conflict, Bailey said, because the 22-year-old newspaper heiress was captured inside and California law allows for a warrantless search in the immediate vicinity of an arrest.
