Cuba plans Rhodesian intervention

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Cuba, fresh from its battlefield successes in Angola, is gearing up to help Rhodesian nationalists trying to overthrow the white supremacist regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith, U.S. officials believe.

The Cuban plan, the officials said, probably calls for sending military advisers and training officers to Rhodesia's eastern neighbor, Mozambique. Black nationalist Rhodesian guerrillas have been using Mozambique as a staging area for guerrilla operations in Rhodesia. A steady increase in these operations has been reported in recent weeks.

Mozambique closed its border and cut off all links with Rhodesia on Wednesday after President Samora Machel said Rhodesia had engaged in air and artillery attacks inside Mozambique.

As described by U.S. officials, Cuban involvement in behalf of Rhodesian guerrillas would be much less ambitious than it was in Angola. There, Cuban troops did much of the fighting for the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola against two pro-Western factions.

The U.S. officials said they were not entirely certain that Cuba would assist Rhodesian guerrillas nor were they able to pin down the form that Cuban aid might take. But they said they expect that some of the 12,000-14,000 Cuban troops now in Angola would be transferred to the Mozambique border area to dispense military advice and training. Such a strategy, they said, raises the prospect of border clashes involving Cuban and Rhodesian regular troops.

The Smith regime in Rhodesia, which broke from Great Britain 10 years ago, is currently engaged in negotiations with black leaders who are demanding an end to white rule. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger expressed support Thursday for black majority rule in Rhodesia and said the current negotiations offer the "last opportunity for a peaceful settlement."

Kissinger called on Cuba to proceed with "great circumspection because our actions cannot be deduced by what we did in Angola." He refused to say what the hostile public view of the military intervention, particularly in a position of giving indication where it is safe to go.

Other U.S. officials said, however, that U.S. action is unlikely to be in a position of giving indication where it is safe to go. It means defense of a white regime.

Strikes, violence continue in Spain

Associated Press
VICTORIA, Spain — This tense Basque city prepared today to bury three workers slain in the worst labor riots since the death of Gen. Francisco Franco last November.

Meanwhile, sympathy strikes and confrontations with police spread to other cities in the region.

Pedro Maria Martinez Ocio, 37, Francisco Aznar Clemente, 17, and Romualdo Barroso Chaparro, 19, were killed Wednesday when police fired into rioting mobs in Victoria, 175 miles northeast of Madrid. More than 100 other persons were injured. At least nine remained in serious condition, including a police inspector who lost an eye when he was hit by a firebomb.

Many streets in Victoria still were littered with glass, broken lamp posts, logs and stones. A communique from city hall Thursday expressed regret over the confrontations.

Strikes were illegal under Franco's 36-year dictatorial rule but have been generally tolerated under the new government of King Juan Carlos.

On Thursday, there were more clashes in Victoria between police and workers, who are supporting a two-month strike by 6,000 metal workers demanding higher pay. The violence spread to the nearby cities of Pamplona and Bilbao. Labor sources estimated 200 workers in Pamplona, 50 miles north of Victoria, walked off their jobs after police erected street barriers and police. Several thousand workers in Pamplona were demonstrating in the streets north of Victoria, dispersed by charging riot police, sources said.

France mourns deaths after riot

Associated Press
NARBONNE, France — Winegrowers protesting cheap imports from Italy and Spain began two days of mourning in southern France today after a gunbattle with riot police that left one man dead on each side and scores wounded.

Violent demonstrations have taken place this week from Marseilles to the Spanish border. With nationwide local elections scheduled Sunday, the growers' problems have become a major political issue.

The Socialist party called for an extraordinary session of the National Assembly to discuss the situation. Socialist leader Francois Mitterrand said the violence stemmed from "an accumulation of injustices."

Interior Minister Michel Poniatowski said on nationwide television that he had ordered firm though moderate police action to halt any further outbreaks.

The gunbattle started Thursday when riot police tried to stop more than 1,000 demonstrators from burning a freight train they had halted outside Narbonne by tearing up the track. For more than an hour, officials said growers armed with shotguns and machine pistols exchanged fire with police using submachine-guns and concussion grenades.

The demonstrators later dispersed, but other groups throughout the southern area maintained road and rail blocks that caused widespread disruption in communications and cut the mail road to Spain. Among other incidents, growers seized two police agents at Beziers and put them on a domestic flight to Paris, telling them to report to Poniatowski about the discontent.

The southern area produces large quantities of low grade wine, about a million gallons a year, and has long been the scene of trouble over wine prices. The growers have protested imports of Algerian, then Italian and Spanish wine under European Common Market agreements.

In the past, commando squads of growers intercepted tanker trucks of imported wine and emptied their contents in the gutters. Attacks on bottlers of imported wine reached new heights with a raid on a winery Monday by two bands of growers, causing more than $1 million damage, by Poniatowski's mate.

Arrests for this raid led to a 26-hour spree of violence in winery offices, electricity lines and television relay stations were bombed.

One effect has been to block television in the whole area.

U.N. tries revival of Middle East negotiations

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS, New York — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim is sending an envoy to Moscow and Washington to look for ways to get Middle East peace negotiations going again, diplomatic sources say.

U.N. Undersecretary-General Roberto Guyer will be in Moscow Tuesday and Washington later to talk to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The obstacle is that Syria and the Soviet Union insist that the PLO be included in the conference, while Israel, with U.S. backing, refuses to talk to the PLO and wants the conference limited to the participants originally invited — Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria.
