

Environment protection fund proposed

Associated Press
NEW ORLEANS — The Louisiana Superport Authority is considering a proposal to require operators of the deepwater port to set up a $500,000 environmental protection fund.

Joseph Cocchiara, associate director of the authority, said Tuesday the fund would "give us the flexibility to act in an emergency" and permit immediate action.

The superport authority and the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port (LOOP), a group of oil companies planning the port, have not reached an agreement on LOOP's liability for any environmental damage from an oil spill.

However, a $200 million federal fund which covers liability has been proposed.

Ex-nun turns to sex counseling

Associated Press
DES MOINES, Iowa — For 18 years Wilhelmina Smith Massey was a nun. Now she's a sex counselor married to the former operator of a massage parlor and adult book store.

By day Mrs. Massey, the former Sister Mary Estelle, teaches sixth graders at a suburban public school. At night she and husband Ron run One-to-One Counseling Service, which specializes in helping people with sexual and marital problems.

Massey has managed three sex-oriented businesses — a dating service, a massage parlor and an adult book store.

"I went through the dating service," said Mrs. Massey, explaining how they met three years ago. "I had nothing to do with the massage parlor or the book store."

Her husband now operates another dating service.

One-to-One has advertised in the classified section of a local newspaper under "personals." It used such approaches as, "Are you knowledgeable about sex? We don't think so."

But Mrs. Massey, 43, said her counseling is not limited to human sexuality.

"It's not just sex counseling — not really. People who come to us have problems in so many areas."

The Masseys have announced plans for a unique kind of counseling session — a "sailboat cruise encounter."

"Basically it's group counseling, with sun, fun and water thrown in," said Massey.

"Counseling is one of my first loves," said Mrs. Massey, who has taught school for 23 years and has a degree in counseling from Southeast Missouri State College. "Teaching is another love."

The former Roman Catholic nun left the convent in 1969.

"I think I just needed a stimulant, friendship and a feeling of independence," she said.

Mrs. Massey said prospective clients are told in advance not to expect any sex in the counseling-encounter sessions.

"There is no misunderstanding about that. It's made clear that no sex is involved when people call in for an appointment. If that's what they are interested in, they ask about it," said Mrs. Massey.

"And when they find out it's strictly counseling, then they say they are not interested."

Her counseling service is really "very legitimate, very wholesome," she said. "It's really terribly ordinary. It's family counseling."

Children's theater opening excellent

By B. J. STRODE
"The Emperor's New Clothes" opened last night in the Forum to a small but responsive audience. The show was excellent and proves once again that children's theater can be creative, professional, and enjoyable to people of all ages. Both the performers on stage and the technicians behind the scenes have captured the elusive spirit of dramatics for youthful minds and hearts.

The role of Emperor was, of course, a very important one, and Phil Hafer carried it off marvelously. His performance showed just the right amount of exaggeration so essential for a young audience. The Empress, played by Pam McCowan, was very straight and sincere, providing effective contrast with antics.

Zar and Zan, the advancing "weavers," were hilariously portrayed by Gailan Woods and Kates, respectively. Their efforts to discredit the writer (Chuck McDaniel) provided delightful moments, movements and facial expressions.

The actors were supported by beautiful sets, designed by Meissner. Simple enough, changed quickly, yet elegant enough to create the proper fantasy, the sets were an excellent feature.

The Aggie Players never cease to find ingenious ways to use the old Forum.

Costumes designed and constructed under the direction of Aileen Wenck added humanity and beauty to Emperor's undergarments, but you must see it to believe it.

The play begins at 7 p.m. on Friday. The Players deserve audiences, and you deserve a show.

Soviets to allow inspection

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The Union reportedly will allow inspection of its underground test sites in exchange for privileges at American grounds.

A top Ford administration aide Tuesday said American Soviet negotiators met in Moscow reached basic agreement on the inspections, which the traditionally have opposed. Details remain to be hammered out.

The basic inspection coincides with today's effect of another U.S.-Soviet pact on the size of nuclear weapons arsenals to 150 kilotons.

The 150-kiloton figure is lent to 150,000 tons of dynamite 10 times the blast that destroyed Hiroshima in 1945.
