

Yell leaders

Mike Outlaw
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
I am a senior and I have been a member of the National Honor Society for three years. I have participated in four sports. I feel I can handle myself in front of people. I am closely associated with the student body and I am a pretty good job at the student body and supporting the athletes.

Dane Bokencamp
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
You have to have enthusiasm. You have to want to do it and have the time to put into it. As far as those qualifications, I believe I am qualified. I think I have the time to devote to it and I believe I would really enjoy doing it.

Mark Pool
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
I would accept any kind of spirit committee. I'd like to see more people involved at A&M than there are now.

Pee Wee Sellars
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
I think qualifications for yell leaders should be a person that truly loves A&M and what it stands for. A person should be willing to give 100 percent to uphold the traditions that are famous for and which we all are proud of.

I'll be a Senior next year. Last year I wanted to run for junior yell leader and I just didn't have the time. People kept pushing me, saying, "We want a civilian yell leader."
Would you accept a women's spirit committee? What activities would you have it perform?
Yes, I would accept a women's spirit committee. I think girls here at A&M have kind of pumped up the Aggie spirit even more, and I see no reason why we should restrict them doing that any further.

Warren Neeley
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
I live over in Moses Hall and I'm sophomore representative on the dorm council and on the judicial board. I'm a member of SCONA. I enjoy working with people. I think that if I was yell leader I could yell and I could help other people to yell. I believe that the crowd and the spirit is a large part of our success with our teams. I think I could do a good job and contribute to our winning.

Joe Mickler
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
I think I am very well qualified for yell leader because I was junior yell leader this year. The qualifications are someone who wants to work, has a deep love for A&M, someone who can communicate to the people. I think I have these qualifications.

Frank Shannon
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
In the office of Yell Leader you have to be a true Ag with maroon blood. You have to know your fellow students. You have to know your school. In short, give your all for Texas A&M. Of these qualifications I think I qualify.

paint signs at the dorms, help form spirit lines. That is a tough question because it has never been attempted at A&M.

Paul Bracher
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
I met up to all the qualifications of the election committee has set aside.

Robbie Tucker
What are your qualifications for the office and why do you want it?
First of all, I was a junior yell leader last year, and senior yell leader are the ones in charge that run all five of them.

Stan Stanfield
What are your qualifications for this office?
I am a University senator from Schumacher, Crocker, McInnis and Caine and a member of the Academic Affairs Committee and University Curriculum Committee.

How important is on-the-job training (internships, practice teaching, co-ops)?
Should such programs be extended and should the Accreditation Boards be pressed into allowing more credit hours for such training? Why or why not?
Such programs have been trying to expand the internship proposal which the Student Senate endorsed this year. Accreditation boards are not the stagnating factor, trying to get their requirements and internships into a four-year program like engineering is the problem.

Should students have input on tenure hearings? Why or why not? On selection of department chairmen? Why or why not?
Tenure and department chairman selection is an area concerning the personnel of the University. Student assessment of the professors is currently used by the selection process. What might be a better question is: Should the process be re-evaluated by the University? Yes.

Should there be greater consideration in evaluation of transfer hours? Why or why not?
Leave the consideration of equal academic credit hours to those who are able to assess that quality, the professional academicians.

What are your qualifications for this office?
I am a University senator from Schumacher, Crocker, McInnis and Caine and a member of the Academic Affairs Committee and University Curriculum Committee.

Whatever happened to the professor evaluations? What are the problems that have been encountered with it and how do you hope to solve them?
Professor evaluations have been compiled and will be in the Battalion office by April 6 for later publication. Problems with professor evaluations have been both mechanical and philosophical, too detailed to answer briefly.

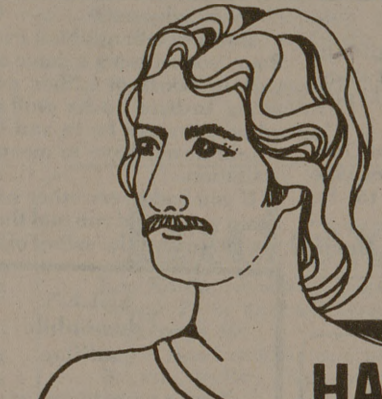

How much influence should students have on their curriculum? How can they get greater input?
Curriculum is influenced by many groups, among them students, faculty, and employees. Students may attain greater input by using what is now available and expanding it. There are three students on the University Curriculum Committee, the first step in changing curriculum.

Jerri Ward
How important are our membership in Texas Student Association National Student Lobby? How do they directly benefit the student?
I would like to see more people involved in these organizations. The Texas legislature considers

V.P. of External Affairs
I will provide such information through the Student Government Informer and The Battalion.

What are your qualifications for this office and why do you want it?
I have been involved in Student Government and the External Affairs Committee for three years. Throughout 75-76 I was the vice-president for external affairs. I've learned how to get things done through my position this year. I can provide the continuity, management ability, and dedication required by this office.
