

NCAA limit costs Intramural sports for anybody Moser field job

Two Texas A&M football coaches have been reassigned to new positions following a recent National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) rule limiting the size of football staffs this season to eight full-time assistants.

Chuck Moser, who was the receivers coach for the Aggies, has accepted a position as assistant athletic director at A&M. Moser, recruited from the field by the NCAA, says, "I'm not happy that I'm not coaching, but I'm happy to be at A&M."

Moser's coaching career began at Lexington, Mo. High School where he compiled a 15-1-2 record in 1940-41. He served five years in the Force before returning to coaching in 1946, and led McAllen to a 21-3 record in seven years.

In eight years at Abilene High, his teams had a 78-7-2 record, won six straight district titles and three straight state championships, 1954-56. His Abilene teams also won 49 straight games. In 1961, Moser served as president of the Texas High School Coaches Association. From 1960-74 he was athletic director of the Abilene Public Schools. For the past four years he has served on the board of the Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness.

Moser says that he has plenty of work to do, even if it is not going to be on the playing field. He says that he is presently analyzing last year's game films in order to find all weaknesses which may possibly occur this year. He says that the use of game films has been, "the greatest motivator there is. They don't lie. The first time I saw them was my junior year at Missouri. Coaching now is so much better it amazes me. It's hard to run something the defense isn't ready for. We played teams last year that used as many as nine different defenses.

"I still attend all the practices (in the stands)," Moser says. He also appraises the Southwest Conference race. "I don't know why Texas shouldn't be picked. They've got nearly everyone back. Ted Constanzo (the sophomore expected to succeed the graduated Marty Akins) probably was the state's most highly recruited quarterback his senior year. I saw him play twice in high school. One game at Temple there were three coaches from the conference there to watch him. We thought then he was going to be great."

Moser says that he thinks there will be a five-team race for the championship. "Rice will have its best team in a long time. They have a senior ball club. People will be surprised at how well they do," he said. He added that the five in contention though, were Texas, Arkansas, A&M, Baylor and Texas Tech.

Dean Campbell is the other A&M coach who has been reassigned, but he will still be on the playing field. Campbell is now a part-time coach for the Aggies, which will allow him to perform duties with the other coaching staff and still meet the requirements of the NCAA ruling.

Campbell joined the Texas A&M staff in September, 1973, as a graduate assistant coach. He became a fulltime staff member in 1975.

"The ruling is not going to affect my coaching duties at all," Campbell said, "but I will have to take a cut in salary."

Both Moser and Campbell said they feel as though the eight-coach rule will be changed next year. Coaches at two schools, Oklahoma and Alabama, have taken the NCAA ruling to court. Final decisions are pending.

The office of intramural (IM) and recreational sports is offering 18 activities for the fall semester. These sports (see list) and the athletic facilities provided for them, DeWane Fieldhouse, G. Rollie White Coliseum, the swimming pool and the tennis courts, are available for recreational use by students, faculty and staff.

The IM Office coordinates the operation of all athletic facilities on campus. Students can reserve courts by contacting the intramural office at 845-2624, Monday through Friday, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Equipment information can also be obtained at this number.

The IM season opens with flag football registration. Last year, 3,552 people played on 222 teams and the competition began in September and ended in November.

To play intramural sports, individuals must select a team manager to represent them. This manager attends a monthly meeting for rules and details of upcoming events and handles all player registration.

Player registration consists of the listing of the players' names and A&M identification numbers. There are generally four events offered each month, with five during October and November. The IM Office splits intramural sports events into three categories, on-going, one-day and special. The on-going have a great number of participants and include all team sports, all doubles and most singles events. The one-day events include activities such as field-goal kicking or cross-country racing and special events involve events which are new and not presently on the IM calendar.

The intramural competition divisions are corps, fish, dorm men, dorm women, independent men, independent women and co-rec. These are sub-divided into class A, persons who are highly-skilled and highly-competitive; class B, skilled and competitive and class C, those interested in the enjoyment of playing. Class A competitors will vie for the All-University titles. All-University title-winners are awarded t-shirts, while class B and C winners are given certificates.

For intramural and extramural information call 845-7826.

Extramural athletics are also called sports clubs and provide a varsity athletic opportunity in sports which are not recognized by the athletic department. These sports are funded partially by membership fees and student services fees. The sports receiving student services fees are archery, bowling, bicycle racing, cricket, fencing, gymnastics, handball, judo, karate, lacrosse, polo, racketball, rodeo, rugby, skeet-trap, soccer, water polo and weightlifting.

Most of these clubs have national affiliations and have participated in national title competition. The bowling teams, both men and women, finished fifth nationally. The fencing team had six qualifiers, and rugby held the national collegiate title for three consecutive years. The weightlifting team lost the national championship last year by two points and the rodeo association sent members to the nationals this summer and the men's team placed eighth.

The archery team competed in the state event and had a few winners. The cricket team, as does the water polo team, have difficulty locating competition. The teams do well though, when they do compete.

Water polo has a 31-1 record. The handball team as well as the judo and karate teams have outstanding members who attend meets under the sponsorship of their A&M clubs.

The polo team traveled to the intercollegiate finals last year and competed against the teams of the Ivy League. The team finished third. The skeet-trap team finished second at state, as did the wrestling team.

For further information, pamphlets about all athletic programs are available in the IM office, which is located on the east side of DeWane Fieldhouse.
