APO's Ticket Mart
has tickets for sale

During many Texas A&M home football games, students are forced to sit at home listening to the game on the radio simply because they couldn't get tickets into crowded Kyle field. But often tickets are available from the Alpha Phi Omega Ticket Mart.

"The purpose of Ticket Mart is to provide the people that have an extra ticket or tickets they don't want a means of selling them," said Roger Lind, project chairman. The members of Alpha Phi Omega (APO), a national service fraternity, accomplish this goal by setting up a table on the main floor of the Memorial Student Center across from the bookstore where unwanted tickets can be bought on the morning of the game.

The tickets are sold for a price specified by the owner, which is not to exceed the original price paid for the ticket. This means that student tickets will be no more than $3.50, non-student tickets no more than $7 and armchair tickets no more than $8.

The money received from the sale of a ticket is returned to the original owner. APO charges nothing for the service except the cost of mailing the money to the original ticket owners.

Ticket Mart opens four hours before the game and closes one-half hour before the game. It will be open this Saturday from 12-3:30 p.m.

APO also sponsors mum sales throughout the football season, and offers free delivery to on-campus addresses. They also put up the flags around the drill field before games and they aid in collecting funds for Campus Chest.

Casas heads effort

Bonfire under way

Preparation for the 1976 Aggie Bonfire started before the ashes of the 1975 bonfire were cool.

Leo Casas, 1976 bonfire chairman, has five assistants known as "Red Pots." They are Don Smith, Grapevine; Dwight Wilson, Karnack; Kelly DeWitt, Dallas; and Dan Eby and Mike Shipp, Houston. Mike Shipp is the only civilian.

Casas has appointed several other men to help them keep things running smoothly and safely.

Mark Pool is head of civilian activities. He works with dormitory chiefs to encourage civilian participation. Pool also supervises civilian wood cutting.

No one is allowed to operate an ax or a chainsaw without a safety card, Casas said. Gary Young, Waco senior, will conduct safety classes for those who want cards. Young said classes will begin two or three weeks before the first cutting day which is scheduled for Nov. 6.

The Air Force cutting coordinator is Alan Day, and Kenny Weynand supervises the Army Division. Weynand said he'll be showing people what to do rather than telling them.

Radio communication from the bonfire site to the cutting area is obviously vital. Dennis O'Driscoll, a Houston senior, operates the two-way radio system. Army radios supplied by Army ROTC are used within each cutting area.

Trey Ivey, a senior from Taft, is in charge of trucks and equipment. Ivey contacts individuals who may lend their trucks or equipment.

"Most of the trucks belong to Aggies, but there are several firms who lend us equipment each year," Casas said.

The center pole, around which the bonfire is built, is donated annually by the International Paper Co. of Navasota. Collier Electric Co. of Bryan supplies a crane to pick up the center pole.

The Milstead Foundation in Bryan drills holes for the center pole and light poles, and many other businesses supply equipment and services annually. Also, area landowners donate cutting areas in return for free land clearing.

Individual cash donations and yearly allowance from the Memorial Student Center fund constitute the bonfire budget. This money pays for gasoline and other supplies which have not been donated.

"We still don't have everything we need," Casas said. "We never have too much. There is always a need for more contributions, equipment and trucks," he said.

"I want to stress that civilians play a very important part in bonfire. I want to encourage everyone to participate," he concluded.

Anyone with questions or donations may contact Leo Casas at 846-2774.
