

Royal says officials only human

Associated Press
 AUSTIN, Tex. — Texas football coach Darrell Royal said Wednesday "not any of us" — presumably meaning coaches or players — "is entitled to be openly critical of officiating," but he insisted a North Texas State player did not catch a pass judged a touchdown.
 Royal's narration of game films of Texas' 17-14 victory over North Texas last Saturday spotlighted the performance of sore-legged fullback Earl Campbell, who recorded personal highs of 32 carries and 208 yards.
 "Officials are human and make mistakes," Royal told the meeting of the Longhorn Club, which usually attracts several football officials. "They blow some, and they blew that one."

 North Texas receiver Jeff Brown said he had taken the ball from defender Raymond Clayborn "before we hit the ground. The ref was there and saw it."
 "I know he didn't catch the ball, and Raymond knows he didn't catch the ball," said Royal, but he noted that on the film club members viewed "you can't see it hit the ground." On a film used on his television show, it is clear, he said.
 Campbell won national back-of-the-week honors for his play against

North Texas even though he had a pulled hamstring muscle, and Royal said the 231-pound junior should be "totally well for our next ball game."
 Texas is off this Saturday and plays Rice at Houston Oct. 2.
 Royal said after Campbell hobbled 83 yards to set up Texas' winning touchdown, he asked him if he hurt his leg more, and Campbell replied, "Nope." Royal said he asked Campbell if he drug his leg on purpose to avoid reinjuring it, and Campbell said, "Yes, sir."
 He reran one sequence of Campbell "fighting and bucking, shoving and pushing" for tough yardage.

Campbell, who had missed two weeks of workouts prior to the North Texas game, was "really out of gas" late in the fourth quarter, Royal said.
 After a sizeable gain, however, Royal remarked, "It takes a lot of guts" — and he paused — "to take him out."

Royal watched Olympic gold medal sprinter Johnny Jones cut inside for short yardage and commented, "He's got a gold medal, and he's going to have to get to using it."
 Jones, a freshman halfback, "has ability," Royal said, "and when he gets it all together and relaxes, he'll use it."

Class structure set in intramural sports

If handball or badminton interest you, next Tuesday will be the last day to sign up for intramural competition in these two sports. Games are scheduled to begin Oct. 4.
 Competition will be in three classes. Class A is the highly skilled class that competes for the All-University championship. Class B offers moderate competition for class championship. Class C competes for class championship, but the main emphasis will be on having fun.
 Handball, both singles and doubles, is played under U. S. Handball Association rules. A match is the best two out of three games, with each game consisting of 15 points. Competition will be single-elimination.
 Handball will be played between 5:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. at DeWare Fieldhouse. Should a player find it necessary to miss a match, he may send a temporary substitute for one match only. Substitutions must be approved by Susan Schleider in the intramural office.

 Badminton will also be single-elimination competition. A game consists of 21 points, and a match is the best two out of three games. American Badminton Association rules will be used.
 Because badminton is an open tournament, no substitutions will be allowed.
 Handball and badminton matches may be played in advance of the regular scheduled time if it is agreeable to all players involved. Players should furnish their own equipment but a limited amount can be checked out through the intramural office.
 Game schedules will be posted Sept. 30.

Lunkers 'N Lies

By JIMMY GUILLOT

This Saturday marks the start of dove season for Brazos County and the rest of the south zone. Legal shooting hours begin at noon and end at sunset each day.
 Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists tell me that this year should be about average in dove populations for this part of the country. We won't get the kind of shooting that's available in western areas of the state, but then that's not unusual.

A breeding survey conducted by TP&W last spring showed a better crop of doves in this area than is normally expected, but a lot of the birds seem to have moved to other areas at this time. The season should start well, at any rate, before hunting pressure scatters the birds.
 The food supply in the Brazos Valley is adequate for a good population of doves, and some migratory birds may pass through soon to help dove numbers.

Dove hunting isn't as popular here as in other areas. This may be due to the agricultural nature of the land. Letty Valdaz, a local TP&W biologist, says that the large amount of improved pastures in this area tend to scatter the doves, rather than concentrate them. Hunters in our area may get a lot more shots at singles and doubles than hunters in areas where the doves stick together more.

 Shooting in the north zone, which started several weeks ago, started well but has tapered off considerably. Biologists think this may have been caused by excessive rain in those areas.

One of the biggest problems encountered by hunters in Texas is the lack of a place to hunt. We have more good hunting land than any other state, but most of it is private land that is hunted by a select few. Landowners are hard to come by unless you have contacts with landowners, and land can be expensive in good hunting areas.

If you want to hunt in the Brazos Valley, about the only thing to do is approach a landowner and ask for permission to hunt on his land. There are some pretty good dove shooting areas in the Brazos River bottom, which is rich in agricultural land.

Much of this land is in crops at this time of year, but there may be some farmers who would allow a limited amount of hunting to be done. About the worst thing that can happen is that he will say no, so it might be worth a try if you are determined to hunt doves this year.

If you do find a landowner who allows you to hunt his place, remember to follow a few common rules. The bad image of hunters in some places has been caused by breaking the rules.

Pick up any trash you drop, and leave his place the way it was before you came. Be especially careful to pick up shell casings after they are ejected from your shotgun. Do not bother livestock and crops, and do not gate after you go through them.

If you get lucky and hit a few birds, offer the landowner part of the game as you are leaving. If you are courteous and take care of his interests when you are on his property, he will probably allow you to return at other times during the season.
