UT senate changes order

By LYNN ROSSI
STUDENTS DEFY REGENTS
Student senators at the University of Texas narrowly passed a resolution last week to take approximately $10,000 from their university account and deposit it in a bank. According to a report in The Daily Texan, last March the board of regents ordered that all funds generated from student fees be placed in the general university account. The regents also ruled that student government be incorporated as an agency of the university instead of a student organization. The student senators oppose the act that regents can now control state funds. However, the resolution passed by the senators is probably a violation of the board's rules and could prohibit student government from receiving student fees.

CLASS BUILDS VEHICLE
A mechanical engineering class at the University of Houston has designed and built an all-terrain vehicle. This strange class project will compete in the 1977 Mini-Baja Contest to be held at the University of Southwestern Louisiana in May. The vehicle, built low to the ground, has four big soft tires, an eight horsepower engine, and a frame, steering wheel and seat. It cost $1,000 to build. In the contest the vehicle must be able to go through 16 inches of water, climb a 30 degree incline and travel 40 miles per hour. Next week the class will begin work on a three-wheel vehicle that will also be used in the contest.
ACCREDITATION POSTPONED

The American Psychological Association (APA) has tabled the Baylor University psychology department's application for accreditation of its doctor of psychology degree because Baylor hires only faculty who have a Christian commitment. The APA, the top accrediting association in the United States for clinical training programs, described Baylor's hiring practice as discriminatory. The lack of accreditation will have no effect on graduating students, according to The Baylor Lariat. However, third-year students will be excluded from internships which require APA approval.

KAMU aids Cousteau series

Texas A&M University's educational television station, KAMU, is co-producer of six half-hour programs entitled "Cousteau: Oasis in Space" to be aired nationally by the Public Broadcast System (PBS) beginning locally next Wednesday. The A&M station has joined with the Cousteau Society, a non-profit environmentally oriented organization headed by Jacques Cousteau, to produce the series that will deal with industrial pollution, food, the water system, population, energy and the future, each in a separate program. The first program, on industrial pollution, will be shown on KAMU at 7 p.m. Wednesday and then rebroadcast at 4 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 26, and 6 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 27. Chastain said the actual filming is by Cousteau Society personnel. KAMU provided story consultation and technical support.

UT FRATERNITY PENALIZED
Kappa Sigma, a University of Texas fraternity, has been suspended as a registered student organization for initiation activity. The fraternity was suspended for six months after the investigation of claims that pledges were required to consume raw eggs, jalapeno peppers, limburger cheese and cod-liver oil. One student was taken to the school's health center after eating the combination. Kappa Sigma is the third fraternity to be suspended in the past six months.
