

Girl is No. 1 after finishing banana splits contests

OLIVET, Mich. (UPI) — Slender and attractive Linda Querth had 10 pieces of pizza for lunch and six generous slices of meat loaf for dinner before she even entered the contest at Olivet College. Then she whipped up 13 banana splits to win. It was the third straight year the junior from Beulah, Mich., has walked away with top honors in the banana split contest. Last year, she put away 15.

The runnerup, Glenn Tarrant of Bath, Mich., quit midway through his seventh banana split.

The contest lasted for 90 minutes. Miss Querth, 5-foot-10 and 135 pounds, consumed 156.2 ounces of ice cream alone.

Each banana split consisted of three scoops of ice cream, one ounce of chocolate syrup, two dabs of whipped cream, chopped nuts, a maraschino cherry and one whole banana. The concoctions weighed about 12 ounces each.

A STUDY to avoid placing heavy reliance on plutonium as a power plant fuel was begun by the government, possibly eventually switching atomic power plants to a different fuel to reduce nuclear proliferation risks, a federal arms control specialist reported today. The new fuel possibly would use thorium mixed with uranium. Plutonium economy would greatly magnify the threat of plutonium diversion to atomic weapons around the world, for plutonium is the stuff from which bombs are made.

PRESIDENT Idi Amin, in apparent retaliation for critical U.S. reaction to recent events in Uganda, today barred an estimated 200 American residents from leaving the country and ordered them to meet with him next week. In a statement broadcast by Uganda Radio Amin said Americans in Uganda were free to stay provided they "do not work for Zionist Israel."
