in lives when they're still dating, they're shackled up for a semester, the longer, but they're not at all point shaping their final lives," Sharon said. "Most of the women are just buddies. They may have a lady who lives out of town."
Sharon and Dale don't party a lot. They have many heterosexual couples, stay home and watch TV most of the time.

They do go to the gay dances sponsored by Alternative and GSSO. They claim that the turnout for these parties has been as high as 200 people.
"There's an awful lot of people here that just want to get their degrees and go to parties. They don't want to be activists. There's another group that is activist. They'll do speakers' bureaus and be interviewed. And there's others who are scared to death and they're not sure what they want to do, but they don't want to be in the limelight. They'll go to parties, but they won't play on our intramural sports teams," Sharon said.

A gay intramural sports team?
"Yes, they even have T-shirts," Sharon said. The team is named after a gay bar in Houston.
Both Sharon and Dale say that the atmosphere here is oppressive. "I really don't like living here," Sharon said. "I came down here from the Northeast and it was a lot of cultural shock. I don't like the oppression and don't like the bigotry that is rampant down here, not just against gays. I don't like the attitude against non-whites. I don't like the attitude against non-Baptists. But, it's good for me here in the sense that there's nothing to do but study."

New regulations apply to all campus buildings

By WENDY TAYLOR
Be careful where you tack up your next free-puppy ad, car-for-notice, or roommate-needed bulletin. You may be violating the changes in the University Bulletin Board Advertising and Publicity Guidelines.

Approved by Texas A&M University President Jack K. Williams Feb. 26, bulletin board advertising and publicity regulations have been extended to include academic buildings and service buildings.
Previously the guidelines applied to bulletin boards, kiosks or other public areas of the University including residence halls, the Memorial Student Center, Rudder Tower and kiosks on Military Walk.

"This change broadens out publicity regulations to include every building on campus," said Dr. John J. Koldus, vice president for student services.

Persons or organizations who post on bulletin boards are also now responsible for the removal of material when the date for posting has expired (not to exceed three weeks or one day following the posted event).

Another change in the advertising and publicity guidelines is the departmental units' ability to impose additional advertising restrictions where that academic department is responsible for specific bulletin boards.

Koldus said the new restrictions are the University's attempt to "refine the helter-skelter, anytime-anyplace advertising" occurring on campus.
Koldus said the new bulletin board advertising and publicity regulations were effective upon William's approval.

THE DEAN OF BEER'S QUICKIE QUIZ.
Q: Chill-Lagering is:
a) A popular German country and western singer.
b) A Scandinavian winter sport played without clothes.
c) A new ethnic TV comedy about the owner of an ice cube factory.
d) The right way to age beer.
A: (d) Sorry, Chill-Lagering is not Olga and Svend running around in a snowstorm in their birthday suits. Chill-Lagering is the way Schlitz ages beer. They age it cold. Very cold. Down to 29.5 degrees. The result is a beer with sparkling clarity. A beer that's crisp, clean and bright. I suggest you look into one right now.
THERE'S JUST ONE WORD FOR BEER.
AND YOU KNOW IT.
