First aid team formed on campus

By MARGIE SANTAMARIA
 If you had needed volunteer first aid a year and a half ago, the only organized source on campus was the University Health Center.

Laura L. Kitzmiller, Health and Physical Education Department instructor-coach, said clubs and athletic teams began asking for volunteer first aiders to be present at certain events.

Kitzmiller said some events, such as the rodeo, require experienced first aiders, so a few of her students combined their efforts to form a first aid team. From this, the Emergency Care Team has evolved, she said.

The team is working with Dr. Claude B. Goswick Jr., director of the University Health Center, and serving both the university and the community.

"If, in the event we would have a disaster here, we would be called by Dr. Goswick to assist him and the medical staff there," Kitzmiller said. "We're registered with the Civil Defense here in case something would happen, like a tornado, we would be of assistance to the community," she said.

The health center lends its ambulance when the team needs to stabilize a victim while transporting him to receive emergency care, Kitzmiller said. She said the MSC gives the club money which is used to obtain more equipment.

Team members have various qualifications to care for victims. Some members are Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT), a few are Emergency Care Attendants (ECA), and many are enrolled in the current EMT class, Kitzmiller said.

This is the first semester the class has been offered here and there is a long list of people waiting to take the course, Kitzmiller said.

The only prerequisite is a standard or an advanced first aid certification. This semester 30 out of 80 students were chosen for the course, Kitzmiller said.

The students are trained in all different types of emergency care concerning bleeding, breathing, splinting, and removing and lifting the victim, Kitzmiller said. She said she conducts part of the training, with help from local volunteer physicians, registered nurses, paramedics and others experienced in rescue training.

Each student is required to complete 40 hours of in-hospital training, Kitzmiller said. They train at Houston's Methodist Hospital and the Veteran Administration Hospital there, she said.

Students also train at Scott-White Hospital in Temple and Seaton Hospital in Austin, Kitzmiller said. The Emergency Care Team receives other assistance from Southmore Hospital in Pasadena and Methodist Hospital in Corpus Christi, she added.

Students have to make five ambulance runs. "We've had the unique opportunity to make these runs with the paramedics and EMTs in Hous-

I wonder if there's such a thing as a spiritual dentist. I think my whole personality is full of cavities.

We're not sure if we qualify for being "spiritual dentists" or not, but if you feel like this, we would invite you to come in for some "fillings" this Sunday!
