

Murder trial defense asks bond release in document

United Press International
FORT WORTH — The defense in the T. Cullen Davis murder trial has decided to push to get the defendant released on bond, using a 113-page document of sensational, but unsubstantiated allegations. Those charges likely will force the trial to a new locale.

Davis is charged with shooting and killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

His application for release on bond contains allegations of drug dealing, threats and violence at the 10,000-square foot mansion months prior to the August slaying of Andrea Wilborn and Stan Farr.

The writ also alleges or suggests: — That Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla said she could make $10 million from the murders if Cullen

Davis were convicted.

— That Mrs. Davis was deeply involved with drugs including cocaine, marijuana, heroin and alcohol.

— That Gus Gavrel Jr., who was wounded by the assailant as he walked in the mansion driveway with his date, asked an ambulance driver to dispose of two bags of marijuana while enroute to the hospital.

— That Gavrel's father told his son to identify Davis as the man who shot him.

— That Gavrel stated to more than one person he did not know who shot him.

— That the murder weapon has never been found.

The most crucial document to the defense is an unsigned statement which Richard "Racehorse" Haynes claims to have obtained from David McCrory, a longtime friend of Mrs. Davis.

The statement, which is neither sworn to nor notarized, describes an incident in which a boyfriend of Mrs. Davis threatened to kill her. It claims she traveled across the country with a man identified as a defendant in a drug possession case and cities their alleged use of narcotics and alcohol in the Davis mansion.

Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry, who successfully opposed Davis' attempt last year to be freed on bond, said the McCrory statement was of little legal value.

Haynes said he included the statement because McCrory said it was accurate even though he refused to sign it.

Phi Kappa Phi to give Junior Award

Nearly 500 faculty members, graduate students and undergraduates will be initiated into the Texas A&M University chapter of the Phi Kappa Phi honor society on May 3. Ceremonies will be highlighted by presentation of the Outstanding Junior Award.

A $500 award, will go to the top junior among 10 candidates. The students were chosen by the scholastic honor society as the outstanding juniors from each of the academic colleges based on nominations of the deans.

Speaker of the 6:30 p.m. banquet will be Dr. Paul F. Deisler Jr., vice president of health, safety and environment for Shell Oil Co. He is a 1946 Texas A&M graduate.

Named the 10 outstanding juniors were Vicki Jan Benton of Menard, College of Agriculture; Don M. Harton of Houston, College of Architecture and Environmental Design; Janet Barnes of College Station, College of Business Administration; Bonnie S. Bendele of Blanco, College of Education.

Also, William Bistline of Beaumont, College of Engineering; Mary Jane Greer of Houston, College of Science; Michelle Marti of Cleburne, College of Liberal Arts; Gary Leavitt of Richardson, College of Marine Sciences and Maritime Resources; Robert Lacy of Lake Charles, La., College of Science; and Jeffrey Edwards of Houston, College of Veterinary Medicine.

To qualify for Phi Kappa Phi membership, students must have a 3.5 grade point ratio and must be in the top five or 10 percent of the junior or senior class.
