Four buildings to be finished by fall

By MARIANITA PADDOCK
Four major construction projects on campus will be completed by the fall semester. These buildings include the Classroom and Laboratory Building, the Architecture Building, Milner Hall, the Soil & Crop, and Entomology Building. Total construction costs are estimated at $23 million.

"They've attempted to blend the Architecture Building with the Systems Building and the O&M Building with the same general type stone," he said.
The four-story Classroom and Laboratory Building includes classrooms on the first floor and laboratories for physics, biology, and chemistry on the second, third and fourth floors. The basement will be used as a self-instruction center, in which students use audio-visual machines for self-tutoring. This center will accommodate 131 students.

"It (the building) blends in reasonably well with the surrounding buildings," said McCandless.
However, one biology student disagrees.

The building doesn't blend with its immediate surroundings because it is too modernistic and the other buildings are of an older design, said Mary McGee, a junior biology major.
But another biology student says that the modern design adds to the campus' architecture.

Tory Lavery, junior zoology major, said it provides A&M with a "nice blend of the old traditional buildings and the new contemporary buildings."
Bill Privett, senior biology major, said greenhouses that were there originally were a waste of space.

McCandless said that fewer night labs are expected next fall with the completion of the Classroom and Laboratory Building.

The Ernest Langford Center will house the College of Environmental Design and is estimated to cost $7 million. The four story building has a partial basement, and solar energy labs on the roof. Solar energy research will be conducted in the labs.

John Merchant, manager of the construction division, said that the building was designed as a teaching facility. Electrical heating, mechanical and air conditioning equipment is exposed inside the building, Merchant explained that with this exposure, students "can get a first-hand view of what goes on in the guts of a building."

The architecture building will have an exhibit studio on the first floor for displaying student projects. It will also have five studios. A two-story gallery is located in the middle of the building.

Mike Jones, a graduate student in Architecture, feels that the building is a "great monument to the people who put the money up for it. As far as education goes—it's lacking," he added.

The renovation of Milner Hall cost $1.2 million, and this fall the math department will have classrooms and offices in the building.

Construction workers gutted the old dormitory and converted it into 100 offices, ten classrooms and several seminar rooms. The basement classroom, which accommodates students, contains special visual equipment to aid in learning.

McCandless said it was expected that Milner would be closed, so little money was spent on maintenance.

McCandless said there is a great need for office space and rooms in a good location. Still, consideration are plans to use Leggett Hall for office space classrooms.

"Leggett isn't a big dorm, doesn't house a large number of students, but it's very important to the students who do live there would like to live there," McCandless said.

The Soil & Crop and Entomology Building on west campus will cost approximately $10 million. The building has six large classrooms, three large auditoriums, 66 labs and 93 faculty offices. Laboratory rooms temperature can be controlled for plant and general research. A courtyard occupies the center of the building.

The distance from the Architecture Building to the Soil & Crop Building is no farther than the distance from G. Rollie Whiteiseum to Zachry, McCandless said.

However, Denise Harrell, agricultural economics major, said that the buildings on west campus are too far away.

A proposal for having the building on the west side of campus at the half hour is under consideration. With 30 minutes in between the students should be able to get to their next class on time, McCandless said.

All of these construction projects are funded through the Construction Funding Act, which provides money for construction on campus.

The Animal Industry Building, located next to the Soil & Crop Building will be ready in the spring of 1978. The five-story building will cost $10 million.

Two amphitheaters, together accommodating up to 500 students will be used for lectures. There will be four classrooms, five teaching labs and 40 research labs. This building will also have a central courtyard and two small libraries.

A new extension to the library planned for 1980.

SENIOR RING ORDERING PROCEDURE

OFFICE OF THE DEAN OF ADMISSIONS AND RECORDS

To be eligible to order the Texas A&M ring, an undergraduate student must have at least one year in residence, credit for at least ninety-two (92) semester hours and be in good standing with the University. A year in residence may consist of the Fall and Spring semesters or one of the above and a full summer session (both the first and second terms). The hours passed at the preliminary grade report period on March 23rd may be used in satisfying the ninety-two hour requirement. Students qualifying under this regulation should leave their names with the ring clerk, Room Seven, Richard Coke Building. This should be done prior to March 23rd in order for all records to be checked to determine ring eligibility. (Any student having completed ninety-two (92) hours at the end of the Fall '76 semester may order at any time. There is never a deadline once the hours have been completed, with the exception of a monthly mailing date.) Graduate students are eligible to order with proof (receipt) that they have filed for graduation.

Orders for mid-semester will be taken by the ring clerk starting March 23, 1977, and will continue until April 26, 1977. Students who do not place their order during this period may order after final grades are posted. All rings must be paid for in full when the order is placed. Please bring mid-semester grade reports along when ready to order. Anyone having failed to leave their names in advance and fail to bring grade report will be asked to return later to allow time for records to be checked. The rings should arrive at the Registrar's Office on June 28, 1977. All rings ordered, regardless of whether on March 23rd or April 26th will arrive at the same time.
The ring clerk is on duty from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. of each week, Monday through Friday. However, in order for records to be checked, orders must be placed prior to 11:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. We hope this information will be helpful and extend our congratulations.
