Women places 16th in meet

Inexperience haunted the Texas A&M Women's Golf team as they placed 16th in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national tournament.

The tournament, held amongst the palms of Honolulu, Hawaii, was won by the University of Miami. Cathy Morse of Miami took the individual title with a 72-hole score of 299.

The Aggies were represented by Brenda Goldsmith, Rita Aquilar, Betty Chia, Carol Berry and Susan Smerek, of whom only Goldsmith had more than one year's experience in national tournament play.

"The girls were relatively inexperienced," Coach Kitty Holley said. "But they will be more seasoned next year."

All but Goldsmith return for next season with Berry and Aquilar having three years of eligibility remaining.

Goldsmith has been the mainstay of the A&M squad throughout her career and is a prime pro prospect.

However, she will not turn professional until after she receives her degree next year.

"We regret losing Brenda," Holley said. "But I think our team will be stronger overall next year."

The Aggies finished their four days in Hawaii with a team score of 1312, only four strokes behind the No. 15 team, Florida International.

Texas A&M had qualified for the finals as the No. 18 team and moved up two notches before the tourney was completed.

Goldsmith led the team with score of 313, posting a 74 on the third round. She ballooned to an 84 for the final round after becoming ill.

Aquilar finished next with a 333, while Chia ended with a 335. Smerek had a 339 for the tournament and Berry finished with a 350 score.

"We didn't do as well as we had hoped," Holley said. "It was a good course... a very fair course. But it was extremely windy all of the time we were there."

Tulsa placed second to Miami in the team race, finishing 16 strokes behind the leaders with a 1,236. The University of Texas placed eighth and Houston Baptist tied for tenth with Arizona.

Defending individual champion, Nancy Lopez of Tulsa, ended the tourney in a four-way tie for second place with a 301 score.

Holley said she was optimistic about next season as two of her recruits could make up for the loss of Goldsmith.

She signed Texas A&A&A women's champ Kim Bauer of Conroe and Wisconsin state champ Andrea Welch. Bauer won the Texas title by 16 strokes over her nearest competitor.

Aggie canoeists take 5 firsts at San Angelo

Trophies were plentiful as the Texas A&M Canoe Club came away with five first places for the nine-mile race in San Angelo.

The state-leading Aggies won five of the six categories. Mike Schively and Peter Derick won the men's cruising division which uses fiberglass canoes.

Robin Harris and Terry Stanford took first in the men's aluminum while Kay Edwards and Trevi Holt won women's cruising. Edwards and Schively took honors in the mixed class.

Edwards also won the women's kayak division. Schively placed third in the men's kayak category.

All of the races covered nine miles except the kayak events which were four and one-half miles in length.

Edwards said the race will probably be state sanctioned next year, that is, for state points. State points are gained in certain designated races to determine the state's representative to the national race.

Schively and his regular partner, John Bugge, completed a 419-mile race from San Marcos to Seadrift recently, winning first in the men's aluminum division.

It took the duo 48 hours and 19 minutes to finish the race, one hour above the course record. Of the 31 boats that entered the race, only 21 finished.

Food and other supplies had to be in the boat before the race, there was no stopping along the way except for water. The two Aggies ran out of food before the second night of the journey. They survived on a minimal amount of sleep, 30 minutes apiece the first day and 15 minutes apiece the second day.

The two had never gone down the river before at night, but managed to keep their boat upright the entire race.

Two former Texas A&M football players, both leaving the school last spring after failing to meet University academic standards, may return for the fall.

Linebacker Roderic Reed and defensive lineman Eugene Sanders are making up for bad grades at junior colleges this summer and Texas A&M athletic department officials are optimistic they will be able to return.

Reed was one of several players looked at to replace all-America linebacker Robert Jackson, who graduated last year.

Sanders, who transferred from Washington last season, was the only starter returning to A&M's defensive line.

Texas A&M Associate Athletic Director Marvin Tate and Women's Athletic Director Kay Don are in Las Vegas, Nev. for the week attending the annual meeting for collegiate athletic directors.

A&M Athletic Director Emory Bellard had Tate go to the meeting in his place as Bellard is travelling across the state to address various Texas A&M booster clubs.

It seems the days when athletes lettered in more than one varsity are drawing to a close as only a handful of Texas A&M athletes participated in more than one sport last year.

Freshman Curtis Dickey competed both in football and track, gaining 726 yards rushing last year as a running back. He also anchored the Aggies' sprint relay unit which was third at the Southwest Conference meet and he placed second in the SWC 100-yard dash finals.

Doug Teague played football and also tried out for the A&M baseball team.

Cindy Gough played for the women's basketball team and also played softball. Susan Johnston swam and ran track for the Aggies.

Strangely, the two top rushing teams in the Southwest Conference last season, Texas A&M and Houston, each ran the ball 669 times. The Aggies got a bit more mileage out of their rushing attempts—not much. Texas A&M collected 3,007 yards on the ground last season for a per game average of 274. The Cougars gained 2,900 yards—39 less than the Aggies—an average of 269.8 yards per game.

Both schools tied for eighth place on the SWC's all-time list in most rushing attempts in a season.

The Aggies also scored six touchdowns via the run than the Cougars—34 to 28. However, both teams were tied in the amount of fumbles lost with 19 apiece.

Baylor and Arkansas should give their fans an eyeful this season as both the Bears and Razorbacks will play seven of their 11 games at home.

The Hogs play three games at Fayetteville and four at Little Rock. Five of Baylor's home games are with SWC opponents—Texas A&M, Rice, Texas Tech, SMU and TCU.

SMU plays five games in the Cotton Bowl, one in Fort Worth and TCU and one in Irving against North Texas State.

The Texas A&M Rodeo Club returned emptyhanded from the national collegiate rodeo held in Bozeman, Mont. last week.

Five Aggies advanced to the final of the competition as club president Robert Cobb expressed disappointment in the overall performance of the team.

"I kind of hoped we'd do better," he said.

Cody Coffman and John Anderson won their preliminary round team calf roping but failed to place in the finals.

John Powell and Clay Zvernick took third in the second round team calf roping.

Terry Chapman had a third and fourth split in the first round of the dle brone riding.
