

But writers pick Tech

Magazine predicts title for A&M

Dave Campbell's Texas Football Magazine has arrived on the newsstands this week, giving its annual prognosis of Southwest Conference and Texas high school football. The magazine picks Texas A&M to win the league title, contrasting to the opinions of the sportswriter's poll which ended in favor of Texas Tech. The writers gave the Red Raiders 100 1/2 points (the votes for probable finish were given a numerical value) to Texas A&M's 98. Defending champion Houston was third in the votes race with 79 points while Baylor and Texas tied for fourth with 18 points. Arkansas, with 6 1/2 points, was the only other school to receive mention.

Only Tech, A&M and UH received first place votes. Typical of those supporting Coach Steve Sloan's Red Raiders was Ralph Bouton of the Arkansas Democrat. "This year it's Tech Quarterback Rodney Allison's turn to spend Jan. 1 in Dallas." As for the Aggies, Kirk Bohls of the Austin American-Statesmen said he gave them his vote, "Because of those four guys who stand behind the center and that guy who can never find his socks and shoes when it's time for him to kick."

third through sixth place teams. Emory Bellard's Texas A&M Aggies are number seven with Penn State, UCLA and Maryland finishing out the top 10.

Grulich made the second team defense. The all-Newcomers team included Aggie offensive guards Ed Pustejovsky and Thomas Gregory.
