Big games: A dime a dozen

United Press International
The most important game of the youthful Southwest Conference season comes up next Saturday night in Lubbock, but it is becoming increasingly clear that big games are going to be common around the league this year.

Texas A&M and Texas Tech, ranked 7th and 8th respectively, will get together in a meeting of the teams that drew the most preseason support as potential championship material.

Both are coming off relatively easy wins — Tech having bashed

New Mexico, 49-14, and Texas A&M having fought off Virginia Tech, 27-6.

But, even though Jones Stadium in Lubbock will be filled and even though a rousing contest is in prospect and even though the winner will have cleared a major obstacle in its bid for the title and the Cotton Bowl, plenty of fun will remain.

There may not be all that much fun in prospect for the University of Houston, since quarterback Danny Davis — the bubbling, confident fellow who guided the Cougars to a co-championship and Cotton Bowl win last year — is out for perhaps six weeks with a shoulder separation, courtesy of the Penn State Nittany Lions.

But the universities of Arkansas and Texas certainly are making noises and nobody can say Baylor's defense will not stop people the rest of the season like it stopped Kentucky last week.

The biggest rumble around the conference last weekend came in Austin, where Texas crumpled Virginia, 68-0. It was the second shutout in a row for the young Longhorns, and fullback Earl Campbell, who had an injury plagued year in 1976, is now fit and menacing.

Campbell gained 156 yards and played only a little more than one quarter.

"You have mixed feelings in a situation like this," said new Longhorn coach Fred Akers. "You take a guy like Earl who is definitely a Heisman Trophy candidate.

"We could have left him in there and he would have gained over 300 yards. Instead, he plays less than two quarters. Are you going to leave him in and create a sensation in the press. Or are you going to work everyone like a team and give everyone a chance.

"Earl plays for the team and he knows the rest of the team needs the training. That's the way he wants it because he is a class individual. But I'll tell you. He was ready to run out of the stadium."

Campbell won't get a chance to run out of the stadium next Saturday since the Longhorns have the week off, but he will get plenty of opportunities this year — including a date with Oklahoma next month. This week's round of action, other than the Texas Tech-Texas A&M meeting, will include six nonconference encounters.

Arkansas, which had a surprisingly easy time in downing Oklahoma State, 28-6, will be at home against Tulsa; Baylor (a 21-6 win over Kentucky) must visit Nebraska, and Houston (which wilted against Penn State, 31-14, as well as Iowa State, 31-14, and Texas Tech, 31-14, will make a trip to Florida, 48-3, will make a trip to LSU; SMU will try to come back from a 24-13 setback from North Texas by entertaining Tulane at poor TCU, which battled and edged and finally lost its 13th straight game, 29-24 to Oregon, has the pleasure of traveling to the West Coast for an encounter with second-ranked Southern California.

Aggies win Broadhead Tournament

By LARRY PARKER

Don Birkner, Diane Birkner, Tim Birkner and Wyatt Birkner took fourth annual State Broadhead Tournament by storm.

The broadhead (type of point) tournament was held Sept. 17 and 18 and was sponsored by the Lone Star Bowhunters Association and the Brazos Bowmen. Competition took place at the Brazos Bowmen range located off Highway 190.

More than 100 participants came from various parts of the state to contend in the hot humid thickets on the side of College Station. The tournament was set up with categories for men, women, and youth. Each of these was divided into a sight and non-sight division.

A sight is a device used to determine range and windage on targets.

"One of the harder aspects of shooting a bow and hitting a target," said Don Birkner, "is to accurately judge distance to an unmarked target."

The narrow winding trails, with half-hidden animal silhouettes, offered more than enough challenge for each bowhunter. Cable-rigged ranging targets were particularly troublesome.

The Birkners managed to take home six pieces of hardware after scores were tallied. Tim Birkner only took the first place in the sight or instinctive division for the day and night shoot, he also set a new record for the highest score ever fired on the course.

In the sight division Wyatt Birkner placed second in the night shoot. Also in the sight division, Don Birkner took third in the night shoot and second in the day shoot. Tim Birkner, his two brothers, and Carter took the third place trophy.

The one mile plus course, tended over a 350 acre range, were deep ravines, small clearings and many forest thickets with holes to contend. Contestants walked the course in groups of four or five, followed a marked trail. One stake along the trail indicated a target was somewhere within a yard range and all that needed to be done was to locate and shoot the target.

Most of the targets were difficult to see. A typical shot of 25 yards sometimes required kneeling, crouching, or tip-toeing to get a hole large enough to allow an arrow to pass through the dense brush.

Each person was allotted one arrow per target and a kill-zone hit was five points and a wound three. Birkner stated that even the prospect of having a teaspin in his hair didn't throw his shooting off much.

WACO — Baylor coach Teaff said Monday quarterback Sammy Bickham and Scott were both questionable for Saturday's game with Nebraska.

Bickham started the opener against Texas Tech, but been nursing a dislocated finger on his throwing hand. He started last week's game at Kentucky, but went out with a dislocated shoulder.

If neither can play, the Baylor start Greg Wood, who suffered an ankle sprain during pregame drills.

HOUSTON — Rice University split end Doug Cummings Monday was put on the injured list for this Saturday's game at Louisiana State University at Route, La.

Coach Homer Rice said Cunningham injured a rib during opening game of the season at Idaho, and then re-injured it last week against Florida.

Last year Cunningham was third top receiver in the conference. He will be replaced Saturday by Charlie Taylor, a Fort Worth native. Officials also said the game at LSU was a sellout with 68,000 expected to attend.
