TECHNOLOGY AND POLICY PROGRAM AT MIT

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is now offering a Master of Science Program in Technology and Policy. This program is designed for persons wanting to participate in leading the development, use and control of technology and its products. Students apply systems approaches to such problems as the control of automotive emissions, energy conservation policy, the use of automation in manufacturing, and the life-cycle design of goods. The program may be particularly appropriate for professionals with practical experience. For information write to:
