Sea grant award given to Dr. Abel

Dr. Robert B. Abel, assistant vice president for marine programs at Texas A&M University, received the Distinguished Service Award of the Sea Grant Association at the group's annual meeting in New Orleans Thursday.

The association represents more than 60 educational institutions which participate in the National Sea Grant Program, a coordinated federal-state arrangement for conducting marine-related research, education and public service.

Abel was director of the National Sea Grant Program from its inception in 1967 until joining the Texas A&M administration in April.

White speaks here on key issues

By MARK POWERS

Mark White presented a polished performance for Thursday's Political Forum audience, sounding out his views on key issues in his bid for the Democratic nomination for attorney general.

White, former Texas secretary of state, resigned Oct. 17 to run for attorney general.

"We have a spirit and pride unequalled by any of our sister states that create abundant economic opportunity here. I want to be a responsible defender of that spirit and opportunity," White said in a half-filled Rudder Tower conference room before launching into a spirited defense of his platform.

Preventive counseling to government agencies was White's answer to saving the taxpayers money by keeping the state out of court.

"Charges of employment discrimination brought against several state agencies could have been prevented through early legal advice about each agency's legal responsibilities," said White.

His approach to the office, White says, would be a friendly one so that state government would regard the attorney general as a friend rather than foe.

White made his strongest statements concerning energy programs and pending legislation. He sees the issues shaping up as a battle between Texas interests and the federal bureaucracy.

"Our problems in energy are all political, pure and simple," White said. "They stem from false economic policies forced upon the energy industry by the federal government."

He added that Texans are willing to pay the price rather than supporting artificially contrived market prices that benefit no one.

Along similar lines, White said that an ironic situation exists when other parts of the country can tell Texas natural gas producers what prices will be paid.

White cited the northeast coal situation as an example of unfair laws. Texas producers, he said, may be forced to supply natural gas at a price set by the federal government while the same authority encourages Texas industry to buy coal at free market prices.

White hinted that the prices charged by Texas producers were not much above cost while coal prices have soared 350 percent since 1973.

When questioned about the duties of attorney general, White stressed that the office had more civil responsibilities than criminal duties.

PLO claims Israelis killed

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Palestinian guerrillas say they have gunned down 20 Israeli soldiers and officers, and clashed with Israeli tanks in fighting that stood in sharp contrast to this week's diplomatic move toward a Middle East peace.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said gunmen opened fire on a packed Israeli military bus Wednesday afternoon near the border town of Metullah.

In Tel Aviv, military sources dismissed the report as "nonsense."

"Our comrades totally destroyed the bus," the Front said in a statement. "The bodies are still scattered around the vehicle." Shortly afterward, a Mercedes staff car carrying Israeli officers drew up behind the bus and the Palestinians unleashed a second burst of machinegun fire, the statement said.

"There were 20 killed officers and soldiers," in the two attacks, it said.

The guerrilla group later said the staff car belonged to Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman but did not say if he was inside the automobile.

Israeli police said Weizman sustained light injuries in a car crash on the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway, far south of Metullah.

The previous night, guerrilla and leftist sources said four Israeli tanks crossed from Metullah into Lebanon. The tanks clashed with Palestinian guerrillas near a village 4 miles inside Lebanon, sources said.

Artillery, heavy machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades were used in the battle, which the sources said killed or wounded an estimated 10 people on both sides.

The latest violence along the border took place in the midst of a dramatic new initiative for peace by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, now in Syria to discuss his offer to go to Israel, and by Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin, who officially invited him to come.
