"No thanks, I'd rather have an apple."

American Cancer Society

Saturday, the first to be sent under the treaty. A total of 100 Americans held in Mexican jails go home by Dec. 17 while about 100 Mexicans held in U.S. jails will be sent to Mexico.

The prisoners were interviewed at Santa Marta Acapulco men's jail, the eastern edge of Mexico City, at nearby Los Reyes women's jail.

There are 572 American prisoners in Mexican jails, most of them serving time on drug charges. Many of those who are not returning to the U.S. because they have been sentenced, have appeals pending in Mexico for five years to their arrest, cannot prove citizenship or are serving their immigration offenses.

Martin Mast, 43, of Santa Marta County, Calif., said 10 prisoners will be left because of mistakes.

"We're very saddened by the fact that many people who wanted to be allowed to go through the process of naturalization and the Mexican government," he said.

"But I'll be able to see my family. I'll be eating better food. I'll have medical attention. I think just the loneliness will probably be ended."

"I think as far as the freedoms of walking around and being in a cell, it'll be harder in the United States."

One hundred men and 26 women prisoners from Mexico City jails will be flown to San Diego Friday and
