Guide aids students

United Press International
NEW HAVEN, Conn. — One guide book probably belongs under the pillow of every high school senior looking into colleges.

This "Insider's Guide to The Colleges" (Berkley, $4.95) gives students' views of more than 200 schools — facts and views usually not found in official publications.

The "Guide," compiled and edited by the staff of the Yale Daily News in cooperation with reporters from more than 150 campuses, isn't meant to please the administrators of the respective schools.

Tips relating to applications: — "In filling out your applications ... don't lay it on too thick; the people reading your applications have very sensitive bull detectors.

Also, don't put anything fake on it. If they find out about it, as they probably will, you've kissed your chance for that school goodbye.

— "Keep your parents at least a thousand feet and preferably a thousand miles away from the interview session. When parents come in, interviews tend to be short, fruitless, and often deleterious.

— The pre-admission interview is basically absurd. If the interviewer makes you nervous, imagine him sitting there in his underwear, and whatever else happens, don't walk off with his pen.

Sample of reports on colleges: UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA, University, Ala. "The football team lives in carpeted, air-conditioned splendor, eats steak, and gets tucked into bed nightly — all comforts of home. For those who don't play football, Alabama is a decent place to go to school, you'll have to tuck yourself in.

ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY, Tempe, Ariz. "If a student doesn't have a car he might as well confine himself to the celibate pleasures of his room. If a girl doesn't have a car the situation is not as desperate."

BARD COLLEGE, Annandale-on-Hudson, N.Y. "The school does not make you, the meat, into a pre-cooked cheeseburger. It lets you along in your own fashion."

BAYLOR UNIVERSITY, Waco, Texas "Baylor took a giant step of the dark ages when the administration modified the dress code to allow women to wear shorts slacks on campus."

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA AT BERKELEY, Berkeley, Calif. "The desire for jobs and an all-encompassing, far outstripping the traditional concerns of Berkeley students for community involvement."

UNIVERSITY OF DENVER, Denver, Colo. "Chances are good that Denver will give you the Rocky Mountain high. It is a modern, progressive place, a natural oasis between Chicago and San Francisco. And the ski slopes are only minutes away."

GEORGIA TECH, Atlanta, Ga. "Note the Tech catalogue boasts a five megawatt nuclear reactor, electron microscopes, large microwave experimental stations, and a lot of other neat gadgets. But most other undergrads never see them except in the catalogue."

HARVARD UNIVERSITY, Cambridge, Mass. "The name Harvard is very prestigious and where outside a 100-mile radius of the downtown area of New Haven, Conn., home of Harvard's biggest rival, Yale. "You will probably get a fair education, without doing much work."

YALE UNIVERSITY, New Haven, Conn. "Yale is definitely a party school, and some think that many undergrads can be found in the library as in the Yale Bowl on Saturday afternoons. At Yale it is a special sort of self-discipline that force yourself not to study all the time. It can be done, but it's difficult."
