

Trip loans offered

By DEBBI FIGG
The Memorial Student Center Council is interviewing Texas A&M University students for a travel assistance loan program.

The program enables students who want to study abroad this summer to borrow money from a travel fund and pay it back after graduation. The fund does not charge interest.

Interviews are being held next Wednesday and Thursday. Students should sign up in the Student Programs office, room 216 in the MSC, for an interview time. They should provide a faculty reference.

The MSC Council will consider financing all travel credit programs but places emphasis on MSC-sponsored programs. The council sponsors the Experiment in International Living, the International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience (IAESTE) and Operation Crossroads Africa.

The Experiment in International Living stresses cultural learning by enabling the student to live with a foreign family. In IAESTE, a student works toward technical major in foreign country. Operation Crossroads Africa, which resembles the Peace Corps, chooses 15 American students to work in Africa each year.

The travel fund has approximately $4,000 this year. The Council will divide this amount to help as many people as possible, said J. Wayne Stark, MSC Director.

The 16-year program has helped approximately 70 students finance their trips overseas. Five of these students were financed last year, Stark said.

The travel loan program is funded by gifts from A&M graduates who have used the loan program. It is also funded by alumni contributions and profits from "We've Never Been Licked," a movie filmed at A&M during World War II.

Losses to the fund are small. Even though there are no legal way to force graduates to pay the fund back, Stark said, only six people have not done so.
