Symphonic concert has feeling, dimension

By PEGGY McCULLEN
Only good things can be said about the Texas A&M University Symphonic Band's concert on Thursday night.

Beginning with "Eagle Squadron March," the band played an evening of music ranging from Broadway hits to the impressionistic music of Debussy.

duced the strong trombone section which filled the theater with remarkable harmony and style.

Selections from "My Fair Lady" made the old feel young, and the young feel old when the band glided through tunes like "The Rain in Spain" and the "lovely" "Embassy Waltz."

The band, composed of students and faculty members, is under the direction of Major Joe McMullen, assistant director of the Texas Aggie Band.

when he led the band through "The Porter," A Symphonic Portrait. Mention must be made of the clarinet soloist who played consistently well throughout the evening.

When you put the Aggie Brass together with the symphonic band, you come up with stereo big band. The satisfied audience enjoyed the finale from Symphony No. 1 composed by McMullen's former director, and later gave a standing ovation as the Aggie Brass marched onto the stage to finish the concert with "Stars and Stripes Forever."

The Aggie Brass is the low brass and trumpet sections of the marching band.

Review

"Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral," from Wagner's opera, "Lohengrin," disclosed what a fine French horn section can do to such an emotional piece. Fast-fingered clarinet players filled the theater with runs and trills in a Federico Longas number titled "Bolero Ritmico."

When lovely Tracy Sowders sat down to play her rendition of "Clair de Lune," she and the keyboard seemed to be one. The moving Debussy piece was played with much feeling and sensitivity, showing off the impressionistic style for which Debussy is so well known.

The overture from "Morning, Noon, and Night," along with "Morceau Symphonique," intro-

Students to see capital Congress over break

Some 40 Texas A&M student have opted to spend their week-long holiday March 12-18 in Washington, D.C. listening to and learning from ambassadors, bureaucrats and congressmen.

The trip, sponsored by the Political Forum Committee of the Memorial Student Center, is designed to show students their government in action and make them more politically aware, according to Tom Floyd, trip chairman.

Cancer is often curable.
The fear of cancer is often fatal.

If you're afraid of cancer... you're not alone. But some people are so afraid that they won't go to the doctor when they suspect something's wrong. They're afraid the doctor might "find something." This kind of fear can prevent them from discovering cancer in the early stages when it is most often curable. These people run the risk of letting cancer scare them to death.
