Carter's energy plan will fail, Briscoe says

United Press International DALLAS—Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Wednesday President Carter's energy plan would not work and the only studies that show it will be made by the Carter administration.

Briscoe recently aired his energy complaints in Washington as the chairman of the oil and gas subcommittee at the National Governor's Conference. He said Carter's plan had an erroneous basis for projection and would not meet its production goals.

"The only projection that showed it (Carter's plan) working were those made by the administration itself,"

Briscoe said at a news conference. He said other studies conducted by various independent governmental agencies and groups show the plan, which could drain Texas of its oil income, will be a failure.

To back up his theory, Briscoe said he could not get computer data on the effects of Carter's plan when he requested it in Washington.

"Only time will tell," Briscoe said. "I'll be satisfied with the plan only when it brings in or supports the search for additional natural gas supplies."

Briscoe said Texas will not cut its energy production and will not give up its gas to the interstate pipeline which is government controlled. "We don't need the federal government's help," Briscoe said. "We've enjoyed about all the help we can stand."

Texas has produced more than one-third of all the energy produced in the United States, he said. In other remarks, Briscoe said he will seek stiff crime legislation.

"I have sent a letter to the groups and legislators as part of a crime package," Briscoe said. "A similar package was not passed by the Legislature last year."

CAMPUS NAMES

Educator named to state committee

E. C. "Gene" Fisher, head of the Vocational Industrial Teacher Education Division of the Texas Engineering Extension Service (TEEX), has been named to a state advisory committee.

Fisher serves on the Apprenticeship and Training Advisory Committee of the Texas Education Agency and State Board of Education.

Its purpose is to recommend and evaluate a statewide plan for development of a comprehensive apprenticeship training program. The committee will deal with administrative procedures and funding formulas to be used in distribution of state appropriations for programs.

Fisher has been with the TEEX division 12 years and has headed it since 1973. He has bachelor's and master's degrees in trade and industrial education from Oklahoma State University. His experience in industrial and vocational training covers 25 years.

The Vocational and Industrial Teacher Education Division provides teacher certification courses for those who teach at secondary, post-secondary and adult levels. More than 2,700 students were in 188 classes conducted in 1976-77 by the division.

Electronics class honors Charanza

Edwin L. Charanza of Caldwell was named the outstanding student of the 24th class of the Institute of Electronic Science.

Graduation ceremonies of the Texas Engineering Extension Service program honored 54 students who completed the 18-month course.

TEEX Director James R. Bradley congratulated the class, which was formally addressed by Dr. William E. Kuykendall, assistant dean of medicine at Texas A&M University.

The institute enables students to obtain the technical information and specialized skills needed to work in any area of the electronics industry. Instruction covers mathematics, instrumentation, drafting, active circuits, digital circuits and communications equipment.

The next class begins March 13. Registration deadline is Monday. Classes are conducted at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center at Bryan, formerly known as the Texas A&M Research Annex.

Lusas named head of Protein Center

Dr. Edward W. Lusas is the new head of the Food Research

and Development Center

Texas A&M University. Lusas has served as associate director of the center, until recently headed by the late Dr. Karl F. Mattil. Harry E. Williams, acting director for the Texas Engineering Extension Station, announced the appointment. He said Lusas also continues as a research chemist.

The protein center, a division of TEES, has developed products which are substitutes for human nutrition by devising methods of processing soybeans, cottonseed, peanuts, coconut and sunflower seeds as food protein bases.

Dr. Lusas has more than 20 years of research and management experience in industry. His work with the Quaker Oats Co. includes bakery research and food development. Lusas is a scientific services manager for the company's John Stuart Research Laboratories before coming to Texas A&M last July.

Lusas has degrees in food manufacturing and food technology from the University of Connecticut at Storrs (1954), the State (1955) and the University of Wisconsin (1958). Lusas also has an M.B.A. at the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business in 1972.
