 He said that pay-backs of these loans should be scaled to a percentage of a student's starting salary after graduation and increase as his salary increases. "College students should have more time to pay back loans," McNeil said.

U.S. swaps for 34 cons

United Press International
 SAN DIEGO — The U.S.-Mexico prisoner exchange has ended with little fanfare, and more than half the Americans who were behind bars in Mexico when it began are still there.
 The unusual convict swap was completed Monday night with the arrival of 34 U.S. citizens, 33 men and a woman, freed from Mexican prisons to U.S. custody, aboard a chartered plane from Mexico City.
 Only 13 persons awaited the plane, in contrast to the hullabaloo that greeted the first plane load of prisoners Dec. 9 when hundreds of banner waving relatives, friends, a congressman and scores of reporters turned out.
 The final returnees, taken to a federal jail, brought the number of Americans released to 281 under the treaty and left 304 in prison in Mexico, federal officials said.

 More had been expected Monday, but five were so close to completing their Mexican prison sentences that they decided to remain behind, said Jim Meko, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.
 The Americans left behind remained for a number of reasons. More than 200 were ineligible because their cases had not yet been completed in the Mexican courts, down to the final confirmation of their sentences, a process which can take two years or more.
 About 20 per cent of the eligible Americans preferred Mexican prisons, where money can buy amenities forbidden in U.S. prisons.

Some wanted to avoid the stigma of a U.S. criminal record, and others were close enough to the end of their Mexican sentences that they decided to skip submitting themselves to American parole restrictions.
 Thirty-six Mexicans serving terms for crimes in the United States were returned Monday, bringing the total number of Mexican returnees to 72, four percent of the Mexican prisoners eligible.
 Most of the returning Americans were drug offenders, but two returning Monday were convicted murderers.
 The Americans are bound to serve out their Mexican sentences under U.S. jurisdiction, but by U.S. rules — unlike those of Mexico — they are eligible for parole.

McNeil favors lax loan rules

Don McNeil, 6th Congressional District candidate, says he is opposed to the Panama Canal Treaties because "even though the canal isn't needed today, it may be needed tomorrow."
 McNeil's Tuesday talk was presented by the Texas A&M University Young Democrats.

 McNeil also said parents should be able to earn larger salaries without damaging their children's chances of receiving a federal government loan or grant for education.

Campus Names

ROTC instructor receives promotion

Army non-commissioned officer, Henderson M. Mendenhall, has been promoted to sergeant first class.
 Mendenhall, a three-year member of the Army ROTC detachment at Texas A&M University, has 16 years of military service and was recently assigned another year at Texas A&M.
 The ROTC instructor has served with infantry units in Germany, Alaska and Vietnam. Specially trained in mountain and winter warfare, Mendenhall was an army ski instructor in Germany and Alaska.

Texas A&M senior given merit award

Texas A&M senior Kent L. Van Riper of Sugarland has been recognized for achievement of the Society of American Military

Engineers (SAME) student post.

The Texas A&M post, of which Van Riper is president, hosted the Texas Regional SAME Conference in late February. It was the first time a student post has ever hosted a regional conference.
 Van Riper received the SAME Award of Merit for 1978, recognizing the achievement.
 He is an industrial distribution major and Company K-1 executive officer in the Corps of Cadets.

YOUR EDUCATION DOESN'T STOP HERE

Your education doesn't stop with a baccalaureate degree. It begins there. Once you enter the world of work, you will gain valuable experience and really discover what it's all about to use what you learned in college.
 Take the Air Force for example. As a commissioned officer you'll be handed executive responsibility on your very first job. You'll manage people and complex systems. You'll be expected to perform well, and you'll be paid well, too. It's worth working for.
 You can get there through the Air Force ROTC program. In fact, we have a scholarship plan that will net you $100 a month tax free and pay for all tuition, books and lab fees. And that will free you to concentrate on your studies so you can get well prepared for where you're headed.
 Check it out. Find out how you can get into a "graduate" program like the Air Force. It's a great way to serve your country, and possibly find your formal education extended at Air Force expense as well.
