Injury-riddled Ags play Bears in Waco

By DERRICK GRUBBS
The injury-ridden Texas A&M baseball team travels to Waco this weekend for a three-game SWC series against the Baylor Bears that could determine a new league leader. Currently, Arkansas is on top with a 9-3 record, but the Bears and Aggies are both close behind in the standings at 8-4 and 6-3 respectively. Should A&M sweep the series with Baylor, and Arkansas lose just one game to SMU this weekend up in Dallas, the Ags would become the SWC frontrunner by a matter of percentage points. But sweeps in this league are hard to come by, especially on foreign grounds.

It's always tough to win in Waco," says A&M coach Tom Chandler. "Baylor has a veteran team this year with outstanding power and overall good balance. All of the hitters in their lineup have the capability to put one out of the park."
For sure, the umpires working the A&M-Baylor series will be hard-pressed to keep enough baseballs on hand. Baylor's diamond is well-known as a hitter's park with short outfield fences and a stiff wind that is usually blowing out. Field a pair of power-hitting teams like A&M and Baylor under these conditions and it's liable to result in quite a few slow trots around the base paths.

LAST 7 DAYS!

Catcher Buster Turner has elbow that was injured last week against Minnesota. And, third baseman Magriner is still hindered by an extended knee that has kept him out of the lineup — except as a designated hitter — since he incurred Mar. 5 in the SWC against Houston. All but McMath and Waco expected to be in the starting Friday when A&M meets Baylor in the series opener at 3 p.m. The order Chandler is batting averages, will have (.343) at shortstop, Robert (.250) at third base, Gary (.314) in rightfield, Kyle H. (.312) at first base, Robert (.220) the designated hitter, (.315) in centerfield, Tim (.267) in leftfield, Turner, catcher and Randy Woodard at second base. Feickert stepped in last after McMath went down with knee injury and did a solid going 2-for-3 with three hits Friday's 8-3 win over Baylor. Another bright new spot in A&M lineup has been Woodard who won the starting job at base after his outstanding performance in the Texas series weekends ago. The Texas sophomore has also given a very tender left shoulder that was bruised in the Texas series two weeks ago.

Both his hometown weekly and Texas' largest newspaper agree...
