plish this is my greatest qualification. Is there a problem of too many athletic events? What alternatives or solutions should be used when yell leaders can't attend a sporting event? There is not a problem of too many athletic events. Before being elected, yell leaders should realize that much of their time is going to be spent at athletic events. Along with the privileges of this position comes this responsibility to the 12th Man.

What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? The nature of the sport should be used to decide the yell leader's attendance. If it requires crowd participation, the yell leaders should be present to lead the 12th Man. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? The attitude that it is "good bull" to break the ranks of the Band or run across Kyle Field needs to be changed. The yell leaders can help change these attitudes by stressing that good Ags are unnecessarily hurt in these situations. Also, "grote" stories should at least be funny.

What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? Yell leaders must always attend those sports events that are highly recognized at an organized Southwest Conference level or national level. After these major events, a yell leader should attend as many other activities as possible. These activities should include varsity sports played by both men and women. As far as varsity sports are concerned, I believe that the yell leader should be there whether the game is at home or away. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? Midnight yell practice is one of the most unique things about A&M. I believe that it should certainly remain as an annual Friday night event before the football games. If any improvement is needed, I believe it should be in the area of maintaining a more orderly presence at yell practices. This is hard to regulate, but I do believe it is a shame that the band is put under pressure on going to yell practice as it is.

What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? No, personally I do not believe there are too many athletic events. Sports participation is a great part of this university and always has been. As for the alternatives or solutions, the only answer is participation as long as the yell leaders' school schedule permits it. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? As stated in the previous answer, I feel the only criteria is school schedule. We all came here for academic purposes so this should be the yell leader's first consideration. Total participation is necessary if our teams are to get the backing they need; the yell leaders are an essential part, but the 12th Man needs to be there in full force to generate the enthusiasm Aggies are known for. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? Yes, I personally feel midnight yell definitely needs improvement. Kyle Field is a memorial and I feel more respect should be shown. By respect I mean that people should think before they take beer or liquor inside; secondly, I feel that they should leave the lights out a little longer (WHOO!) to enrich that good ole Aggie tradition.

as long as people realize that some sports events there is no yell leaders can do organized or unorganized yells, for that matter. I see no reason for yell leaders not attending the designated events they do, but if for some reason they can not attend, then by communicating with a few students maybe the word will be passed see no reason why at least one leader can't attend, anyway. What criteria should be used to decide what sporting events yell leaders should attend? Basically, just a good sense of judgement. A Southwest Conference affiliated event where a large enough crowd attends so that yelling yells is possible. The yell leaders are only human; if they do the best, no more can be asked.

order to be able to work with the student body. Is there a problem of too many athletic events? What alternatives or solutions should be used when yell leaders can't attend a sporting event? I don't believe there is a problem of too many athletic events. Texas A&M is a major university and competes highly on the intercollegiate level. I think it is important that all Aggies compete in those sports that give our school any recognition. I believe that all Aggies are representatives of Texas A&M and that when yell leaders are not present, the students will act and take up any slack.

Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? Midnight yell practice is a tradition. To change what goes on at would be changing a tradition as well as A&M itself. Now, I do believe that only matters dealing with the matter at hand, "beating the hell" of whom ever we are playing should be discussed. This way, yell practices will be once again for the purpose of enriching student spirit and not to criticize and give opinions on other matters.

Basketball Highlights

Basketball has now closed its season. With 570 teams competing, the division games are on par with the All-University matches. Here are some highlights from the division competition. Playoff results will be out next week.

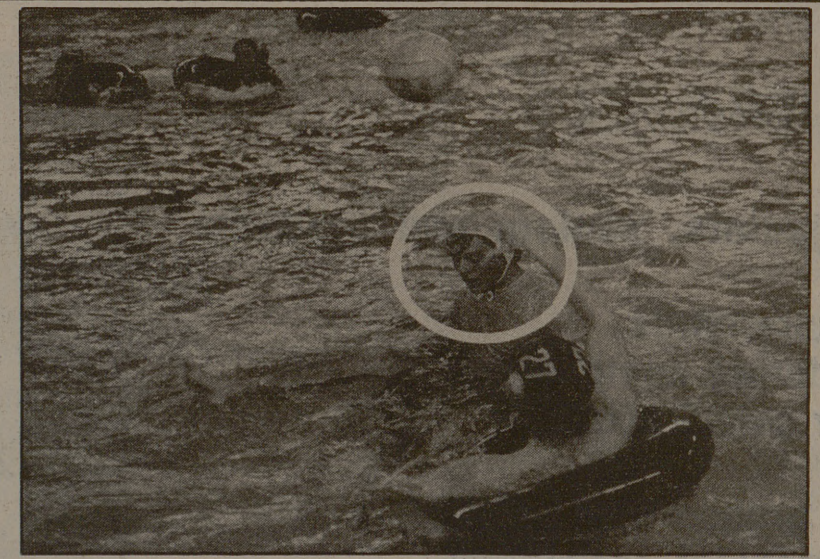

Women's dorm Class A competition was narrowed down to the Mosher Pistol Petes against the Fowler Jockeys. High scorers for the Petes were Valerie Pechacek with 8 points in the first half and 2 in the second and Linda Dieken who scored 6 in the first and 4 in the second. High scorers for the Jockeys were Ruth Latham with 6 points in the first and 2 in the second and Janelle Overhouse with 4 points in the first half and 2 in the second. At half-time Mosher led by 7 points; a lead they maintained to win 29-22.

The Aston Lone Stars and the Puryear Playboys played a highly spirited game for the men's dorm division Class A competition. Both teams had a large team showing and scoring was spread out amongst the members for both teams. The second half was demanding as Aston scored only 1 more point than Puryear. Aston won by 7 points, 42-35.

F-1 attacked D-2 in a fairly offensive game for the Corps Class A division playoffs and trailed by 1 point at the half. High scorers for D-2 were Joe Jennings and Mike Anthony with 7 points each for the first half and 5 and 4 points respectively for the second. High scorers for F-1 were Mark Maroney with a game total of 14 points and Berry Evans with 16 points. Half time saw a score of 23-24 with D-1 leading. The second was an exciting soar of 17 points by F-1 to win 41-35.

Fish Class A competition saw a close battle between D-1's #1 and Squadron 2. High scorer for D-1 was Jim Lawson with a game total for 12 points, and the rest were spread amongst the other team members. High scorers for Squadron 2 were J. Roosma, M. Probst, T. Adair, and D. Quinn. At the half D-1 led by 4 points for a score of 22-18. Squadron 2 scored 22 points in the second half to edge by D-1 with a 40-37 victory.

The Women's Independent Class A match was a very defensive game during the first half. BSU #1 led at the half, 12 to the Tang Gang's 9. The high scorer for the first half was the BSU's Iris Tipton. The second half saw more of an offensive game as the Tang Gang raked in 13 points and BSU tallied up 23. High scorers for the second half were BSU's Shirley McDougle, Beverly Baum, and the Tang Gang's Susie Parker and Lyndie Kern. BSU #1 won 35-22.
