Is there a problem of too many athletic events? What alternatives or solutions should be used when yell leaders can't attend a sporting event? No, there is not a problem of too many athletic events, but the ones in which yell leaders should attend should be justified. Obviously doing yells at a golf meet is a little out of place. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? I suggest a committee be formed of student and faculty members to determine at which athletic events yell leaders are needed and should attend. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? Yes, we go to yell practice to practice yells and get the fighting Texas Aggie spirit, but also the students at this time should learn more about other A&M traditions. There also needs to be more organization for crowd control. Better preparation and organization before midnight yell practice can make it more enjoyable.

or solutions should be used when yell leaders can't attend a sporting event? I don't think there are too many sporting events. I do feel that it is the yell leaders' responsibility to attend as many athletic events as possible. Due to the large number of athletic events, I think that it would be impossible for all the yell leaders to attend all athletic events. What could be done is to send a few yell leaders to different events. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? The yell leader committee should decide which events the yell leaders would attend. There should be input from the student body as to which events they think the yell leaders should attend because yell leaders are supposed to serve the students. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? I really like the idea of midnight yell practice. I think it serves the purpose of getting the students "fired up" before a home game. I do think that we need to remember that there are parents and visitors in the stands and act accordingly.

yell leaders can't attend a sporting event?

This question is ambiguous. If you mean should the yell leaders be expected to attend every athletic event represented by A&M - no they shouldn't. There should be a standard set for what events the yell leaders will conduct and that's it. There should be no reason for there not to be enough yell leaders to successfully handle the job. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? The number of spectators has a lot to do with it. The purpose for having the yell leaders at a game is to promote enthusiasm while keeping control of the crowd, if not too many spectators are participating, it would be hard to justify their presence. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? I would like to see yell practice become much less the drunken riot it has become recently and more a time to get fired up - to turn our attention to the game ahead and show much more respect for ourselves and our visitors (especially old A&M). Aggie tradition isn't being so sauced that you don't know or care what's happening.

Is there a problem of too many athletic events? What alternatives or solutions should be used when yell leaders cannot attend a sporting event? There are not too many athletic events at A&M, but students must realize that yell leaders cannot possibly attend every event held. Even if yell leaders cannot attend every event, an alternative would be to encourage greater student body participation and support. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? The Southwest Conference recognizes seven varsity sports. The yell leaders should make a definite schedule of events they are able to attend. I feel that yell leaders should not be split into different groups because they are here to unite the various factions into the twelfth man; they should stand as one rather than stand divided. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? The yell leaders pride themselves in crowd control, but trouble often evolves. Many people come into Kyle Field either drinking or drunk. Kyle Field is a memorial, and drinking has no place there. This past year, a fellow Aggie suffered a broken neck when a drunk attempted to run across the field. I feel if all Aggies will take pride in their school and respect its traditions, extra safety precautions will not have to be taken.

yell leaders can't attend a sporting event? No, because this university is made up of a very wide spectrum of people and when there is such a wide spectrum of people there should be events to accommodate them. Because of our huge expansion we sometimes don't have the facilities. First I would like to stress that a yell leader is elected to represent and serve you and he should attend a specified sporting event unless under abnormal circumstances. But if not, we should rely on the twelfth man such as when E. King Gill stepped in ready to play if we had lost another player in the Dixie Bowl of 1922. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? Major or minor sport (type); attendance (popularity); or and feasibility of participation. If it is humanly impossible for the yell leaders to attend every sporting event on this A&M campus I feel that something should be arranged for the yell leaders to represent A&M at women's athletic events (basketball). I feel this cannot be decided by one person, but rather by the Administrators, yell leaders, and its participants themselves, whether this be all yell leaders at a few sporting events or a couple of yell leaders at more activities. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? Anything can be improved, as of right now there are no drastic changes, maybe to increase the efficiency of the Midnight Yell Practice and to follow the regulations set before a little more closely.

I feel that all events could be attended by at least one yell leader by use of a rotating schedule. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell should attend? I feel that all sporting events, both major and minor, in which

Texas A&M is represented should be attended if at all possible. This would include both men and women's competitions.

No, there are not too many athletic events. If anything, there are not enough for the girls. Out of five yell leaders we should be able to get at least a few to every sporting event. I can't see why not. But remember, the university is growing and sports are growing with it. If it gets to the point where we are having trouble getting yell leaders to all the events, there is no reason for the sports to suffer. Simply create another yell leader position or two. What criteria should be used to decide which sporting events yell leaders should attend? I think we should attend all athletic events whether they are varsity or extramural club sports, male or female. If someone decides that we need not attend in our official capacity as yell leaders we should still try to go attend in the stands. As yell leaders we belong to the 12th Man. Not just Cain Hall and Aggie athletes are Aggie athletes whether they are NCAA or not. What I'm saying is, if you are an Aggie club sport or something, give me a call and I'll do my best to get to your game. Does midnight yell practice need improvement? If so, what? Yes, we have a real problem with the sound system and it sure could use some work. Sometimes I had trouble hearing last year and so did a lot of others. I think it is a problem that can and should be solved.

I feel I have the sincerity and honesty to represent Texas A&M in its highest standards of sportsmanship and gentlenesship, and at the same time display my excitement in its typical Aggie fashion. I can't see A&M going to show bands, dancing girls or cheerleaders. The yell leaders have been or solutions should be used when yell leaders can't attend a sporting event? The problem is not too many athletic events, A&M should be as athletically involved as possible. The only problem might be the attendance of the yell leaders at all these events. To solve this is going to take a lot of work between the newly
