

Aggies receive awards

By CHRIS PICCIONE
Seven Texas A&M University students received the Distinguished Service award Saturday night at the 28th annual Memorial Student Center (MSC) Council and Directorate

Awards Banquet. Recipients include: Brad Wakeman (SCONA), Larry Briggs (Great Issues), Sarah Ferry (OPAS), Ronald Woessner (MSC Council), Mary Greer (MSC Council), Sharon Taulman (MSC Council), and Paul Haensly (Political Forum).

Lynn Gibson, 1977-1978 MSC Council and Directorate president, received the Thomas H. Rountree award. The purpose of this award is to honor a distinguished leader of the Texas A&M student body.

Ray Daniels was introduced as the 1978-1979 MSC president. Outstanding members of the MSC committees received appreciation awards for their work.

The J. Wayne Stark Special Project Award for distinguished service was given to Terry Floyd who coordinated Political Forum's trip to Washington, D.C.

New award given

Seniors Kerstin Archer, left, and Joe Martinez received the first outstanding senior awards for the College of Liberal Arts last week. Dean W. David Maxwell presented the awards, engraved paperweights with the Aggie seal. The Liberal Arts Student Council, which developed the award, plans to make the presentation an annual event.

Col. Dooley will speak at 75th Aggie Muster

The Diamond Anniversary of Texas A&M University's "Aggie Muster" will feature Col. Tom Dooley, an Aggie who was one of the survivors of the infamous siege of Corrigador by the Japanese in World War II.

The events during Muster, April 21, will begin at 5:30 p.m. in G. Rolie White Coliseum.

Aggie Muster has a heritage which began in 1903, when students of A&M College gathered spontaneously to recall incidents of their college days and to pay tribute to former students who had died during the preceding 12 months.

This date also emphasized the Battle of San Jacinto which triggered the final defeat of Gen. Santa Anna's Mexican army and the beginning of Texas' independence.

The Silver Anniversary Muster in 1928 was called San Jacinto Day, and incorporated "Roll Call For The Absent." This tribute had begun a Muster a year earlier. Taps sounded during an Aggie Muster about 1933.

The Golden Anniversary Muster was described in an issue of the Battalion as being "held in late years in front of the Memorial Student Center in 1953." The ceremony highlighted by an early dinner classes for a review of the Aggie Cadets, prior to formal muster.

Gov. Dan Thornton of California, recalled to his mind that this Golden Anniversary Muster was "50 times more traditional than the first."

Thornton assured that "Aggies and Americans everywhere pause a few minutes each year to remember those who lived their busy and diverse lives to protect our proud heritage... and fear for the future."

Texas new prospect for freshwater shrimp

One day soon an old Texas rancher may walk out on the front porch and say, "You boys ride out and check the shrimp. I'm kind of worried..."

Shrimp, what shrimp? If everything goes according to predictions, Texans may soon see the day when shrimp are commercially farmed in freshwater inland ponds, says a Texas A&M University scientist.

"I feel when the development of the freshwater shrimp industry comes, Texas is one of the better places for consideration," reports Dr. Robert Brick of the Texas A&M Wildlife and Fisheries Sciences Department. "We have an extremely large land area and the right kind of water. Texas is in an excellent position to be one of the forerunners."

"There is already the possibility of small family operations now. But the large scale operations are still a long way off, at least until we know a great deal more about the mass production of freshwater shrimp," Brick says.

Freshwater shrimp farming will advance like any other animal production system, explains the scientist. It depends on biological and economic factors. The better the biological controls, the greater the profit margin.

Brick claims the key is a balance of top quality feed and proper population levels. Access to the right type of feed can be a problem.

Shrimp are easily satisfied and will eat just about anything from catfish feed to chicken feed, but Brick says an economical feed will be designed to meet specific shrimp nutritional requirements.

The Texas A&M scientist points out basic nutritional requirements for maximum production still need to be studied and developed.

"You have to develop a determining if something is worth he explains. 'This is particularly difficult with shrimp. Water has the right quality, the stock right and the food correct..."

One problem growers must with is shrimp cannibalism. Hopefully, proper management control this factor at an acceptable level.

One type of shrimp evaluated for aquaculture is Macrobrachium rosenbergii. Another is Penaeus from Southeast Asia, the variety recently brought to the United States. Seven to nine months usually required to get the shrimp to a marketable size.

"The freshwater shrimp will start in the areas of Texas that have the longest growing season," says Brick. "The longer the season, the bigger the shrimp will be when they reach marketable size."

"I wouldn't want to predict the time the profit levels for shrimp on a private enterprise basis," adds the scientist, "a good sound management, a good can eventually be made."

"Certainly the business in infancy, and I'm certain it will name a A&M is establish a basis for industry in Texas," he says. "We iter the likelihood of such a venture quite good."

For anyone thinking of into the business, Brick warns are no nurseries in Texas. Shrimp can be shipped Florida.

He explains that larval have to be raised in a safe environment until they reach juvenile stage. Shrimp begin egg and develop through larval stages to juvenile stages.
