Farm to be foster home

By CHRIS PICCIONE
Still Creek Christian Farm will become the new home for seven foster children when the housing facilities are completed next year.
The Still Creek Farm is a 117-acre tract located on the northwest edge of Byran, directly off Sandy Point Road.
The purpose of the farm is to help meet the needs of young people and allow for development of personal responsibility, good work habits, and fellowship.
The Answer, a non-profit organization located on University Drive, has owned and operated Still Creek Farm since 1976.
During the summer, the farm employs young people in a Summer Work Program.
In addition to these 20 youths, seven foster children from the welfare department will be living at Still Creek permanently.
Seven to 12 children, adopted and living together, comprise a "foster group home." If more than 12 children are adopted at once to live together they are considered to be living in an institution and must meet the specified licensing standards.

Supervising the children will be a husband and wife team of the Answer counseling service, said Bobby Hubley, Answer program coordinator.
The foster children will work in the 7-acre produce garden with the Summer Work Program youths.
"We want to create a family situation, combining personal counseling and family care," Hubley said.
John Huff, who participated in the Summer Work Program last summer, said he carried water for irrigating cedar trees, cleaned up old boards for use in building, picked and cleaned vegetables, and dug fence post holes.
Wayne Brunt, 15, another summer worker said, "It's really good to have responsibility like this. I feel like it's getting me ready for other jobs later on."
The cost for restoring and furnishing Still Creek Farm will be approximately $100,000. It will cost an additional $3,000 a month to feed and house the seven foster children and pay live-in supervisors.
"Three thousand is a lot of money, but it's hard to put a price on helping a person," Hubley said.
The state pays $2,000 annually to the parents who adopt foster children. This amount does not include the cost of clothing or medical expenses.
The farm will be financed by donations. It is also seeking aid from federal grants, such as the Moody Foundation, Hubley said. So far, less than $1,000 has been collected.

Football game shuttle considered for 1979

By LAURA HENDERSON
A shuttle bus to home football games for off-campus students may be in operation by the fall semester of 1979, said Mary Hutchison, chairman of the football busing committee of the Off Campus Student Association.
OCSA conducted a survey the week before spring break to measure student reactions to shuttle bus service to football games or midnight yell practice. This amount does not include the cost of clothing or medical expenses.
The program will be financed by donations. It is also seeking aid from federal grants, such as the Moody Foundation, Hubley said. So far, less than $1,000 has been collected.
Hutchison said the survey showed 700 students were interested in the shuttle to football games. About 400 were interested in it for transportation to midnight yell practices, she said.
The program still needs more research, said Mitchell.
OCSA is in the process of doing research on successful shuttle bus systems at other universities in Texas.
from on campus students," she said.
The original shuttle bus program was to provide transportation to off-campus students to home football games and midnight yell practices, said Mike Mitchell, OCSA president.
Hutchison said the survey showed 700 students were interested in the shuttle to football games. About 400 were interested in it for transportation to midnight yell practices, she said.
The program still needs more research, said Mitchell.
