

Spurs, Bullets all tied up in series

United Press International
The pressure clearly is on the San Antonio Spurs as the semifinal NBA playoff series with the Washington Bullets moved Wednesday to Capital Centre in Landover, Md., where the Spurs never have won.

The Bullets raced to a 121-117 triumph for their first victory ever at HemisFair Arena Tuesday night, evening the best-of-seven series at one game apiece.

More importantly the victory allowed Washington to steal the home court advantage from the Central Division champions who had won the series opener 114-103.

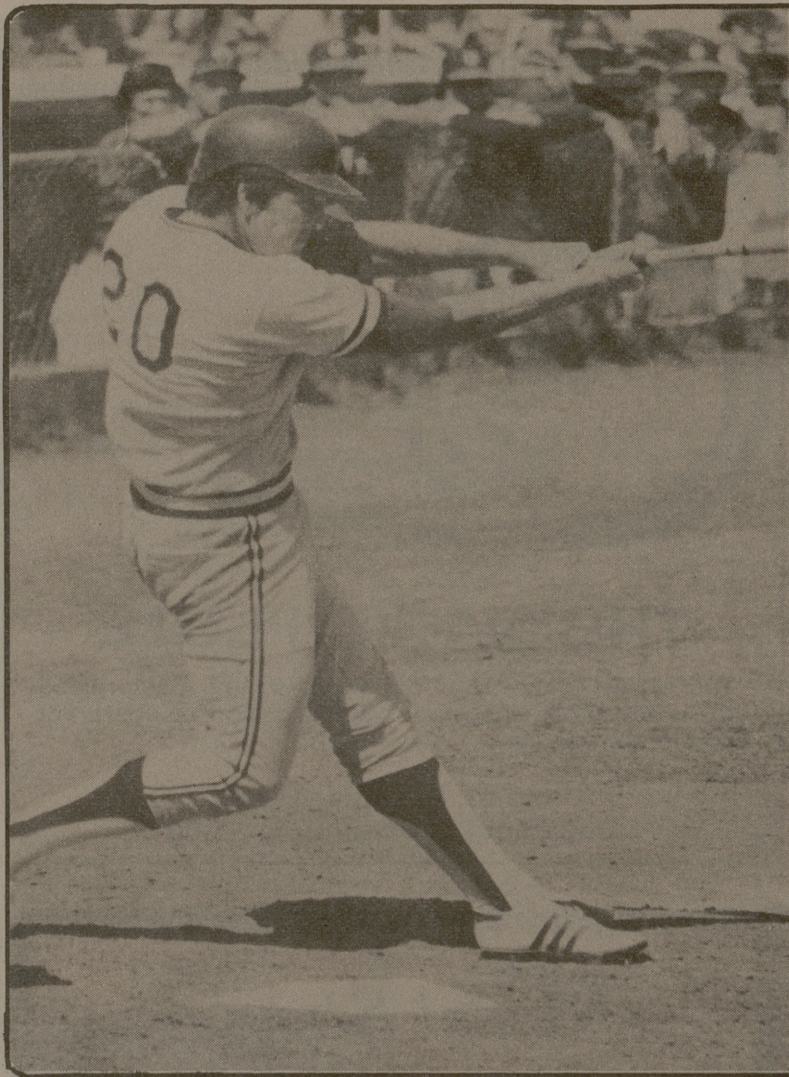

"I liked the situation we were in when we came down here," Washington Coach Dick Motta said as his team prepared for homecourt stands on Friday night and Sunday afternoon. "We came here knowing we had to win at least one. Now they've got the same situation facing them up there."

Spurs Coach Doug Moe admitted the monkey now is on his team's back because the Spurs have to beat the Bullets at least once in Landover to win the series, but he added that San Antonio was capable of accomplishing that feat.

"We can't worry about the split," Moe said. "We have to come back ready to play. We've come back all year long and now we've got to do it again."

Although Washington held a 21-point lead late in the third quarter Tuesday night, George Gervin exploded for 17 points in the final period and the Spurs moved within two points with 1:33 left before the rally fizzled.

National Superlatives

Two Texas A&M baseball players are producing nationally recognized performances this season. First baseman Kyle Hawthorne, left, leads the nation with 13 homeruns. Aggie ace Mark Thurmond, above, is one of the nation's leading pitchers. He has a 9-0 record going into this weekend's series with Texas Tech.
