74-year-old uses judo on mugger

CHICHESTER, Sussex, England — There is at least one English mugger who will think twice the next time he picks on a little old

He will be the burly fellow about six feet tall, in his 20s, who attacked 74-year-old grandmother Ethel West as she was coming home from her shopping Thursday heavily laden with groceries.

The mugger tried to grab Mrs. West's handbag but she grabbed his arm in a judo hold instead and twisted it behind his back until he screamed with pain, wrenched away and fled.

"I used to practice judo when I was younger, but I have been getting a bit unfit recently," Mrs. West

'If I hadn't been loaded down with shopping and taken by surprise I would have floored him," she said.

Political forum is A flexible in choices

By RENEE' PEVOTO
Political stars like Sen. William
Proxmire, Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. and women's advocate Nikki Van Hightower have been presented to the Texas A&M University campus by Political Forum.

The student-run committee in the Memorial Student Center, has been an independent committee since

Prior to this it was a sub-committee of Great Issues, another MSC committee, which brings speakers of a broader spectrum.

"We bring people to talk about politics," said Jane McGregor, chairman of Political Forum. She said the committee has a political slant with a lot of flexibility.

Three programming committees, national, international, and state, have the job of compiling a list of prospective speakers. The MSC Council must approve every speaker before he is invited to or allowed at Texas A&M.

McGregor said the council gives them a lot of freedom. Generally, the reason a speaker may not be allowed to come to Texas A&M is because "one of the council members has heard he is a lousy speaker," McGregor said.

Ray Daniels, MSC Council president, said although it is not a policy, it is an assumed restriction that a person under indictment of or convicted of a felony may not speak.

"The only speaker that might have been disqualified within the past 12 month, while I have served as president, was because he had spoken before and was an inept speaker," Daniels said. "Our function is merely to approve speakers to come and speak at this Univer-sity," he added.

The national programs committee chairman, Blaine Bull, confirmed this in his cause of wanting John Dean to speak. The council refused permission because of Dean's background as a convicted felon along with the fact of crash planning.

'I think it is Political Forum's responsibility to bring new ideas in-rhetoric," Bull said. "I don't see problem with this year's coun getting speaker approval, but have any problem, we inten-fight it." Some department haround campus, Bull said, will the committee to get speaker proval.

"Even if these persons are no reactionary, the students h right to hear their views expres McGregor said that the filt process guarantees that "s service fees are being used w She added that the council want students' money to be p someone with a notorious

Speaker fees come directly student service fees. Poli Forum's budget is approxim $14,000 for the coming year

About 90 percent of all s that come to Texas A&M are Congressman and senators $1,000-$1,500 plus travel, food lodging. Political Forum may higher fees for more popular ers. They may also charge adm to hear the speaker.

This semester Political Form sponsored about 20 speakers.

Although Political Forum by students, teachers and advise the group. About 40 ofth members are active, McGr said, adding that they are antic ing more members next year

On The Road

You know, almost ever since I ean remember, something has been following me around. It's been a sort of a sense that I'm not alone, that something's been waiting for me to turn and find it or see t. An event or happening is waiting for me to arrive. It's sorta hard to describe, yet that doesn't in any way diminish its presence or its

When I was very young, maybe six or so, my two older sisters cornered me in a bedroom. They told me about Jesus. How He had died for me and forgiven my sins. How I could live with Him forever. That word "forever" cut right through me. I can almost place myself back in the experience of that moment. I caught a fleeting glance of something eternal, something far be-yond the limits of myself. Since that day I've not been alone. Now I wouldn't have you think my life since then has been one of heavenly experiences. For the most part it's been quite the opposite. There was much strife in my home. A constant quarreling and division developed between my parents. Irrational and unbelievably painful events transpired. Things happened that seemed to strike at the very heart of my be-

My mom felt my hurt almost as much as I. In a situation beyond her control she pointed me toward God. She spoke to me so much about Jesus that I'd get mad at her. What place did He have in our home? What was He doing about this situation? I mean at times it was a real battle to go home. If there wasn't some completely erazy fight going on, there'd be good old mom preaching to me and watching to see what effect this debate was having on my life.

For the sake of self protection, I built a wall around my inner self. There were very few people who earned enough of my trust to enter nto that sanctum. My feelings and went into myself, the more thorough my barrier to the outside world, the more acutely aware I became that I was not alone. Further inside of me than I could read to these things as part of a remark there in the more acutely aware I was not alone. my behavior reflected the fact that God was inside me. It didn't stop me from doing all the things high school kids do and never tell their parents. Perhaps I even wandered further afield than you. Yet there was this person pricking my conscience. He always seemed to stop me from taking that one last step that would turn my escapades into disaster.

Now I wouldn't have you ing my life was instantly formed in a blaze of glory.

I used college as sort of an emergency exit from home. I'd had my fill with those problems. It was time to get far away and see something new. A big city like Houston ing more and more humaning more humaning more and more humaning more humaning more and more humaning more and more humaning has about as many diversions as one could ask. I spent two years exploring downtown, the people, concerts etc. as well as many varieties of weed and pills. The person inside watched all this, pushing the button on my conscience more frequently and with more force.

The last two years I decided to get my act together. The escapades were more controlled, replaced in part by some heavy duty studying. I got the good grades and found a beautiful girl who loved me more than I could believe. I figured I was beginning to get life wired, you know — under control. This was the kind of situation I'd always looked forward to. In my mind's eye I figured this level of living would carry with it happiness.

The fellow inside me had different ideas however. He began pressing me for much more than He ever had before — He wanted my life. I didn't know exactly what to do. Here I'd begun to realize some positive things, some dreams come true in my life — yet He was telling me to lay them aside. I
