Ali known worldwide

United Press International
MOSCOW — They even recognized Muhammad Ali in Red Square.

Just like he said they would. Of course, it's not every day that a man with a pretty face jogs through Red Square at 6 a.m. in a blue sweatsuit.

Ali danced and shuffled along the cobblestone streets in the shadow of the Kremlin wall today, then grinned and signed autographs.

Most of the Russians, many out early to watch the changing of the guard at the Lenin mausoleum, were shy at first. Many clutched scraps of paper and a pen wondering whether to approach the former world heavyweight boxing champion.

But the famous Ali grin wiped out all barriers — linguistic or political — and Ali scribbled away merrily.

At one point, Ali spotted an African student about 50 yards away. "Hey, there goes a black man," he said.

So Ali stalked over to give an autograph while the Kenyan student beamed.

"I've got the most recognizable face on earth," Ali said. "Tell me, who else could come to Russia like this and be recognized."

Ali arrived in Moscow Monday for a 10-day visit on an invitation from the Soviet State Committee on Physical Fitness and Sports. But he still can't believe it.

"Russia," he said, shaking his head in disbelief during a half-hour drive through Moscow. "You know, you don't realize how far away you are until you get home and look at a map."

Ali will fly to Tashkent in Central Asia Wednesday to Samarkand before returning to Moscow during the weekend.

He said he hoped to meet Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev before he leaves.

On a drive to the city of Moscow, Ali said he could believe how different the Soviet Union is from the United States.

"It's the only country I've ever seen where the only thing that is blue is blue jeans," he said.

Bonds sign with Texas

United Press International
ARLINGTON — A Texas homerun-hitting outfielder signed a major league team in the offseason, Tuesday became the Rangers' latest millionaire.

Bonds, who was playing an option when traded by the White Sox to the Rangers, said this season, has reported a contract for a reported $1 million according to club sources.

The contract would be in the same financial package as pitchers John Lackey and Alexander and outfielder Zisk.

Bonds, who slugged 37 home runs and stole 41 bases last season, California Angels but was pointed early this season to Chicago White Sox, said happy with the contract.

"Baseball's a game you play with a free mind," said Bonds. "I think I'll be able to relax ball now. I'm just glad to hope I can now start to contribute to the team."

Bond hit .264 last season. Angels but has been in a slump at the plate this season, hitting .249 and six homers, two-run homerun won a week and he has yet to be out while stealing a base.

Wills want unique

United Press International
NEW YORK — Many hoping his Father's Day this year includes seeing Bump, high on the list of for the July 11 major league all-star game at San Diego.

Wills set an example for the current Texas Rangers base man, with six all-star appearances. Now a baseball coach and instructor, the 45-year-old appeared on the first sponsored computerized lots, in 1970-71-72, as well with Los Angeles.
