Taxpayers' revolt has impact

Congress continues to trim budget

United Press International
 WASHINGTON — Congress, spurred by the growing taxpayers' revolt, is showing no relief in its attacks on government spending. The House has imposed spending cuts on several spending bills since California voters approved Proposition 13, which slashed property taxes and forced spending cutbacks in that state.

On Tuesday, the Senate went along, imposing 2 percent across-the-board cuts on the Treasury Department, the White House and several smaller agencies, which slashed about $144 million from the bill and reduced its size to about $8.8 billion.

Combining the House's across-the-board cuts so far and the Senate action Tuesday, Congress has trimmed $678.5 million from the spending bills.

Part of the Senate cuts for the Treasury Department came on an amendment to try to block a proposed gun control measure. The amendment denies $3.8 million in funds to the department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The deletion was close to the amount the bureau would need to carry out a plan to require all handguns to carry serial numbers and to require the reporting of firearms transactions and thefts to a computer data bank.

Another amendment approved by the Senate would block President Carter from imposing additional oil import fees and deprive the president of a tool he hoped to use to pressure Congress into enacting the final part of his energy package. A White House spokesman said Carter hopes a conference committee will override the Senate action.

The Senate refused to go along with another amendment, which would have denied Richard Nixon from receiving a presidential pension or funding for office staff.

The amendment, offered by Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., was tabled on an 89-2 vote, with only Abourezk and Sen. Kaneaster Hodges, D-Ark., voting against tabling it.

The Senate passed another bill Tuesday that would authorize the government to set up three demonstration projects to test the commercial feasibility of extracting oil from shale.

Supporters of the bill said shale could give the nation a year fuel supply if it can be economically produced.

The House was not in session today, but the Senate takes up a controversial proposal to provide $1 billion in federal loan guarantees to New York City.

Both critics and supporters of the bill expect Senate passage, but until after much rhetoric, the House already has approved a bill on loan guarantees.

In another development, the Senate scaled down commitments on the labor law revision because only two senators voted to testify.

Diesel engines tested for cancer-causing effects

United Press International
 DETROIT — Remember years ago, when the surgeon general warned cigarettes cause cancer? We've come a long way.

Since then, the government has warned about saccharin, hamburgers and even bacon. Today, there may be a new twist — though both U.S. and foreign automakers hope not.

The Environmental Protection Agency was expected to release in Washington a preliminary report on a six-month study of diesel engines and the possible cancer-causing effects of their exhaust particles.

There was concern among auto makers that a finding critical of diesel exhausts would have resulted in tighter emission controls — something U.S. and foreign automakers say would force them to curtail plans to boost output of increasingly popular diesel-powered cars.

expects sales this year to top 120,000.

The EPA, under provisions of the federal Clean Air Act, must propose a standard this year for particulate emissions from diesel engines. The standard will take effect in 1981.

Concerns about potential cancer-causing effects of diesel emissions were raised by a recent study that found mutations in certain bacteria exposed to diesel exhaust particles.

The EPA undertook the study to determine how strictly diesel particulates should be controlled. Diesels already are subject to EPA regulations covering other automotive pollutants — carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides.

General Motors Corp., which this year began offering diesel engines in its Oldsmobile line, has announced plans to triple diesel production in 1979. GM officials have predicted by 1985 more than 25 percent of cars will be powered by diesels.

bullish predictions for the year will "obviously change" if the EPA "comes down hard" on diesel emissions.

"But if their standards are into account the current state of the art, there should be no problem," he said.

Although the other domestic firms have no immediate plans to build diesel-powered cars, foreign car makers are taking a lead at the U.S. diesel market.

Mercedes-Benz and Volkswagen each expect to sell more than 20,000 diesel-equipped cars a year. Peugeot, of France, is expected to sell 4,000. Fiat, Volvo and Mazda also reportedly are developing diesels for the American market.

A Mercedes spokesman said strict diesel standards would pose serious problems for the German auto firm, which exports diesels for more than half its U.S. sales.

"But whatever the standard we're going to meet it," he said. "We're not going to walk away from it."

Senate considering bill to give New York City $1.5 billion loan

United Press International
 WASHINGTON — The bill before the Senate, the "New York City Loan Guarantee Act of 1978," is local, but the issues are national and even international.

The Senate is considering — perhaps for the rest of the week — whether to provide $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees to the city to enable it to borrow money and thus keep itself from bankruptcy.

The guarantees, running up to 15 years, would replace federal seasonal loans to New York City, approved by Congress in 1975, which the city has repaid with interest and which expire June 30.

The House already has approved $2 billion in loan guarantees. Both critics and supporters predict Senate passage, but not until after much rhetoric.

Proponents — including the city government, its leading bankers and labor unions, the state of New York and the Carter administration — say the effects of bankruptcy would spread nationwide in rapidly expanding circles.

Treasury Secretary Michael Mentall says bankruptcy of the world's great financial center would have a psychological impact around the world, weakening the U.S. dollar.

Opponents also argue in terms of the U.S. dollar.

Republican Sens. John Tower of Texas and Jake Garn of Utah say many other cities have experienced financial difficulties but have expected to cope by making choices involving taxes and spending.

They complained in a joint statement that New York state cut its taxes $750 million. Tower said the money should go to the city.
