Supreme Court's decision on abuse hearings delayed

United Press International
An assistant state attorney general says further clarification will be needed for a U.S. Supreme Court decision requiring child abuse hearings within 24-hours of reported incidents.

The 24-hour requirement was part of a wider ruling by a special three-judge federal court in Houston which declared various sections of the Texas Family Code unconstitutional. Attorney General John Hill had sought a higher court order to prevent the state from complying with the lower court order pending appeal.

The Supreme Court Monday refused to grant a stay in the case until it has gone through normal legal appeal channels.

Assistant Attorney General David Young said the state's complaint about the lower court order was based on a requirement of hearings for parents within 24 hours of the time children are taken from health-threatening situations. He said he expects that changed.

"All we want is a reasonable time to have a hearing," Young said. "We don't want to be in a situation of having to return a child to an abusive situation because we can't find a judge."

A clarification of the order could suit our purposes," he said.

In upholding the lower court decision, the Supreme Court also called for the elimination of a suspected abuser data bank and other changes in Texas juvenile welfare procedures.

The Willis, Texas, father who challenged seizure of his children and won the first round of the legal battle said the decision was justice.

"I feel that was the way it has to be because it was the only right thing to do," said John Pleasant Sims, 36, a supervisor for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in Houston.

Sims' lawyer, Gladys Goffney, said authorities in 1975 illegally kept his children, ages 10, 10 and 9, for 42 days after he spanked and "blistered" his adopted son at school in the presence of a teacher.

The teacher had complained about the child's behavior and later called child welfare authorities because the child "had difficulty in sitting," Mrs. Goffney said.

She said the parents were denied adequate notice, a speedy hearing and had their names placed in a child abuse data bank without a court finding that they were guilty of wrongdoing.

Young, who said federal judges have never allowed consideration of evidence the boy "was in the hospital for 11 days," said the case was "very significant" but Monday's ruling was not.

Appropriated funds fill golf course sand trap

United Press International
WASHINGTON The Air Force spent $18,799 to replace sand in the sand traps at a golf course at the Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Tuesday.

In a statement released by his office, the Wisconsin Democrat said the Air Force had told him 1,400 tons of sand was bought to replace sand that had been washed away by rains.

Proxmire said the $18,799 represented the cost of the sand alone and did not include transportation and other costs.

The senator said his attention had been called to the purchase by a San Antonio resident who wrote that he and his wife had earned $14,000 and paid $1,400 in taxes in 1977.

"We hate to see our money being poured into a sand trap," the senator's informant wrote.

"I couldn't agree more," Proxmire said, adding that he had no objection to the maintenance of golf courses for military personnel if it was done with non-appropriated funds.

AFL-CIO endorse candidates Hill, W

United Press International
SAN MARCOS — Attorney General John Hill and the political branch of the Texas AFL-CIO are on the same side now.

The organization's Committee on Political Education Monday endorsed a straight Democratic Party ticket, topped by Hill's governor campaign and Krueger's effort to unseat John Tower in the Texas Senate.

Mark White, candidate for state general, was endorsed by the committee earlier.

Both Hill and Krueger, the labor meeting Monday saying he was prepared to support his now defeated Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

"As far as I am concerned, the case is closed," Hill said.

Union officials interrupted a vacation to speak to the AFL-CIO leaders.

"I'm not mad at anyone," Hill said. "How could he be?"

Hill promised to listen to their viewpoint.

"You are going to be ment in the appointment. All groups are going to be represented in appointments. Our doors will always be open to you."

Hill urged labor leaders to support his campaign.

publican Bill Clements 7 election.

"We have got to get out for us this fall," Hill said.

Nixon appointee going to be spending money. We know the match their money — our money. We know the match our money — our money. We know the match our money — our money.

Hill said polls showed 97% of Clements now.

"Our polls look good," Hill said. "My poll showed I'm not even going to reach about them so no one should be placent."
