Carter pondering change in ICBM missile strategy

United Press International
WASHINGTON — President Carter is back in the Oval Office, reportedly pondering whether to inform the Russians he has decided to build multiple-hole installations for America's missiles when the current SALT protocol expires.

The president spent 10 days at Camp David, the mountaintop retreat in the nearby Catoctin Mountains of Maryland, and returned late Sunday. Aides said he did some paperwork on his vacation, including approving Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's condemnation of the Soviet Union for deciding to place two prominent dissidents on trial.

Carter reportedly is weighing a decision on informing the Soviets the United States may alter the status of its Minuteman ICBM missile system by digging thousands of underground silos so the missiles could be moved around from one to another.

That system, plus one to put the missiles on tracks for concealment purposes, would make the ICBMs less vulnerable because an enemy would never be sure where they were located.

Both have been under consideration at the Pentagon and the White House for months, but the Washington Post said Sunday the decision in favor of multiple silos has been all but made and Carter is pondering telling the Russians.

Carter leaves Thursday for a visit to West Germany and a two-day economic summit in Bonn to discuss mutual problems with leaders from Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and Canada.

The Europeans and Japanese are expected to press Carter on plans to stiffen the sagging dollar by reducing oil imports, and Carter plans consultations on the new controversy with Chancellors Schmidt.

Sen. William Brock, D-Mich., in an interview on CBS' "Over the Top" broadcast Sunday, for Carter's biggest job at the moment is to "convince the Gen. tax the Japanese (to) adopt a policy of expanding their economy from rapidly and I think the Germans are doing it."

Since becoming president, Carter has been reluctant to step into Washington. His long-term strategy was a nine-day, seven-day stretch away from the White House last winter.

This time Carter is going to the presidential retreat for a period, with the exception of a return to the White House for the July Fourth fireworks and an 11-hour tour of the Civil War battle grounds.

Nazis rally in Chicago, vow they will 'finish job' as Jews protest

United Press International
CHICAGO — A small band of brown-shirted Nazis Sunday predicted a Jewish holocaust in America, but their diatribes left a crowd of several thousand people feeling flat.

Frank Collin, Chicago's Nazi leader who denies the Jewishness of his own father, strutted on the top of a white van and shouted to the crowd:

"I can't believe there was a Holocaust. But if there was, they (Jews) deserved it. Just as they're going to deserve it this time."

Michael Allen, the leader of the National Socialist Party of America in St. Louis, spelled it out. Of the Nazi massacre of Jews in Europe, he said, "This time we're going to finish the job."

Twenty-three Nazis with swastika armbands showed up for the rally under a swastika emblazoned banner of "white victory." They shuffled nervously before television cameras until Collin began his high-pitched tirade.

There were scuffles and police — 1,500 strong — reported 65 arrests. At least four injuries were reported. The sweaty crowd in Marquette Park appeared to have expected a great deal more action than that.

The Nazis had fought for the right to demonstrate in the racially-tense neighborhood for two years, carrying their case to the Supreme Court and winning it last week.

Yet the Marquette Park affair might have caused little fuss had Collin's Nazis not attracted the world's attention earlier by threatening to march in the Chicago suburb of Skokie, which is 35 percent Jewish.

Protesters from around the country had vowed to block that march and some were in Marquette Park Sunday, though most of them were barred by police.

About 2,000 people were in the park and 3,000 others — mostly counter-demonstrators — were reported by police in the area. Most of those listening to Collin appeared to be on his side, but there was a strident group that attempted to drown out the Nazi speeches.

When it was over, bare-chested youths in the park seemed to want more and milled about for almost an hour in the muggy, 90-degree heat. A group of people wearing Jewish skull caps was chased until police came to their rescue. One of the few black youths venturing into the park was beaten. His clothes were torn from him before police could reach him.

Youths shook their fists in the faces of Jewish death marchers who gathered in the youths cried, "White Counter-demonstration vocal, chanting 'Death and 'Go to hell, Frank.'"

But if some in the violence, they had to throwing a few rocks at Jews and sympathizers of the Nazi rally from outside.

One of them, Faye Wadler, the only survivor of a 1945 Nazi death camp, said she was in the rest died in the death camp.

"I can never forget, I owe it to my dead parents to march."

Oil entitlements unfair to Texas, Bentsen claim

United Press International
WASHINGTON — An oil payments program that started out with a single purpose has been tried for so many other things it is a "Rube Goldberg contraption" that penalizes Texans to help New Yorkers, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, charged Monday.

Bentsen asked the Senate energy conservation subcommittee to oppose a Department of Energy suggestion which would increase the entitlements program as it applies to residual oil.

He said the entitlements program has strayed far from its original intent to equalize the cost of crude oil to refineries.

"The entitlements program has become a Rube Goldberg contraption, one that is troublesome to both the public and private groups that have become entangled in its bureaucratic tentacles," he said.

The entitlements program was designed to raise the price of oil to 100 percent of the market price. The program was later to residual oil, imported and others as an industry largely in the eastern United States. The residual oil entitlement, out at 30 percent — that difference in price was only paid by the payments to the purchaser to another.

The Department of Energy proposes to raise the residual entitlement to 100 percent of the market price. Because residual oil is much for generating price changes reflecting the electric bills.
