Craft shop offers summer courses

By SCOTT PENDLETON
Battalion Staff

Students and teachers alike are in demand at the MSC craft shop. Registration for nine more crafts courses has started and two of the courses have already filled up.

The craft shop staff is also looking for teachers for 27 other courses to be offered in the fall.

Most of the new summer courses start next week. Participants must register at least one day before the first class session.

The new classes are making macrame pot slings; basket-making; needlepoint; crochet; macrame; antique refinishing, and pottery. The classes in lathe and silkscreen are already full.

One hundred and thirty-three people have participated in the courses offered so far this summer.

"Things seem to be going pretty well," said Karen Zantow, assistant program coordinator for the craft shop. "Everyone seems pretty happy," she said.

The craft shop offered 23 classes at the beginning of the first summer session. Of those, nine were cancelled because not enough people enrolled. Six more courses finished this week.

The craft shop is located downstairs in the northeast corner of the MSC. A variety of hand and power tools can be used upon presentation of a student ID card. To use some wood-working tools students must first pass a written and practical test.

Any student, faculty, and staff member of Texas A&M may enroll in the craft shop courses. Most courses have a small lab fee. Students must provide their own materials, but the craft shop will supply all tools.

A crafts fair is planned for August 2 and 3 to be held outdoors between the MSC and Rudder Tower. Students, faculty and staff may display and sell their creations. Zantow expects many people currently
