Protest rally ends in skirmish

United Press International
DALLAS — An emotional, candle-light rally protesting the government's decision not to get involved in the police shooting of a young Mexican-American ended Sunday in violent rock and bottle throwing and a skirmish with police.

The rally was in protest of the Justice Department's decision last week not to file civil rights charges against a policeman who shot and killed a Mexican-American boy five years ago.

Hundreds of Mexican-Americans gathered in 100-degree heat at a local park early in the afternoon to hear speeches by several persons involved in the civil rights movement.

The rally continued through the day until late evening when a band of youths reportedly pelted a passing taxi with rocks and beer bottles. The cab driver got out of his cab to argue with the youths and the argument soon turned into a brawl with police reinforcements called in.

More rocks and bottles were thrown at squad cars and officers in riot gear until the park could be cleared late in the evening. At least one youth was arrested in the skirmish.

Earlier, several hundred Mexican-Americans carrying candles shielded by paper cups marched to the site where 12-year-old Santos Rodriguez was shot by a policeman in a 1973 "Russian Roulette" style interrogation.

A wreath was left at an intersection where the youth was shot in the head and killed at point-blank range.

The rally was in protest of Attorney General Griffin Bell's decision Friday not to file civil rights charges against Darrell Cain, the officer who shot Rodriguez in his patrol car while the youth's hands were handcuffed behind him.

Cain was found guilty of murder with malice and was sentenced to five-years in prison, which the Mexican-American community believes was too light a sentence.

The Rodriguez case has become the focal point for outraged Mexican-Americans in Texas. The youth's first name — Santos — has become a symbolic reference and protest of the deaths of other Mexican-Americans at the hands of police in Texas.

Perfecto Delgado, a spokesman for the Committee for Justice, strongly called for immediate establishment of a community review board to investigate complaints against police, allegations of civil rights abuse and charges of brutality. Currently, policemen investigate their fellow officers.

Mexican-American civil rights groups pressure on the Justice Department to prosecute Cain on rights charges, and the attention of the color pictures of the scene.

Nude UH yearbook photos replaced with blank pages

United Press International
HOUSTON — This year's University of Houston yearbook will include 19 blank pages "of where we are in 1978" instead of a series of photographs of nude students, the yearbook editor said.

Greg Stephens, 22, editor of the Houstonian, said the blank pages were not meant as a protest against Barry Munitz, chancellor of the central campus, who Friday barred publication of the nude photographs.

Stephens said some yearbook staff members suggested using the pages as a forum to attack the administration, while others urged him to fill the space with other photographs.

Stephens said Sunday he never intended to embarrass or attack the administration and would not do so now over the controversy. He said the photographic series by UH Professor George Krause was planned out of respect for the university's students.

"We wanted to give them something really nice like Mr. Krause's work," Stephens said.

He said since the photographs have been rejected, he decided to simply leave the pages blank except for a statement written by Krause when he submitted the photographs in mid-May.

"The nude has almost always been a controversial subject in the history of art, and our times seem to find it difficult to accept many serious photographs of nudes."

"Some of my classes are an attempt to deal with the nude in a contemporary way, executed with a modern medium (photography)," he said. "But these photographs, even though they include nudity, really are about the students, the places and the times. That is the reason these photographs were rejected."

Munitz said he had administrative. He said the university's student publication, the Houstonian, was not to publish the photographs. He said the photographs were not to be published in the yearbook.

"I have no desire to see a First Amendment case," Munitz said. "I think it is inappropriate for a yearbook to publish such 'sophisticated' photographs of students show to the children."

Munitz has more appropriate gallery showing or separate collection of other faculty artists.

Family of murder victim berate police investigation

United Press International
BEAUMONT — The family of five persons allegedly killed by a former in-law say careless police investigators trampled much of the evidence needed for a conviction.

Sheriff Doil Pounds of Anahuac did not take fingerprints or photographs at the home of the Bishop Phillips family where deputies were sent after son George Phillips returned home late July 2 and found his parents, brother, sister-in-law and nephew missing.

Deputies entering the simple frame home found a fan running, the television set blaring, chicken in a frying pan burning, and a coffee pot that had perked itself dry. There were a few spots of blood.

"It didn't even look like a crime scene," Pounds said. Although officials have declined to criticize Pounds' members expressed their anger.

"Those sons of a bitches face get on this thing," said Clifton Phillips of the family. "You're damn right it was done a better job. I had confidence in the sheriff and all cops."

The FBI did not arrive until three days after the reported missing. Hence, car used to transport the common graduation case a day later. The family's disappearance was being investigated.

One week later, Joseph Dugas, 32, was found concealing the bodies of the family's disappearance. He was found in a hospital. The actual murder scene was not found.
