Job offers for grads up overall

United Press International
NEW YORK — New holders of bachelor's degrees in petroleum engineering stepped out of college this year and had their pick of jobs with an average pay of $1,653 a month to start, the College Placement Council reported Tuesday.

And the good times for such specialists are part of the "biggest job boom" for new college graduates in the 19 years the council has been reporting on job offers to new bachelor's, master's and doctorates.

Jean Kessler, the council's director, said overall job offers to bachelor's degree recipients were up 35 percent from last year 90 percent ahead of the offers made in 1976.

"This is the all-time biggest job boom," she said.

Even in the humanities — English, music, art, history and such — job offers made by industrial and governmental recruiters on the campuses of 160 colleges included in the survey were up 21 percent.

At the doctoral level, 20 percent more offers were recorded than last year and almost 60 percent more than at the end of the 1975-76 school year.

Master's offers did not show the same gains, rising only 3 percent over last year. However, the increase over two years ago was almost 50 percent.

The leader in monthly salaries for master's degree recipients was chemical engineering at $1,629. A doctorate in chemical engineering brought offers of an average monthly paycheck of $2,074.

The money for the humanities graduates — lowest for any new degree-holder was $571 a month.

"Those in the humanities have a harder time, but there are opportunities in sales, insurance, and banking," Mrs. Kessler said.

Space center holds reunion for astronauts

United Press International
HOUSTON — Some wore conservative business suits and a few sported leisure suits and bright shirts with floral patterns.
But the 26 former astronauts who came home to the Johnson Space Center Monday were mostly wearing smiles as they walked the familiar grounds and tuned their minds to the space jargon that dominated their lives for a decade or more.
It amounted to the first "class reunion" the astronauts had held. There was one new twist for the former astronauts who talked to their successors — some are men.
Most of the former astronauts were as laconic as in the days they first braved the frontiers space, tried new technology and intimately walked on the moon.
Absent from the briefings were Eastern Airlines board Chairman Frank Borman, and two U.S. senators, John Glenn of Ohio, first American to orbit the Earth and Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico.
