To the Student Body of Texas A&M:

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the Texas A&M University campus. For those of you who are returning, we are certainly glad to have you back. To those who are new to Texas A&M we extend a hearty welcome and hope that you will soon become a part of the rich heritage of this University. Texas A&M University is currently the fastest growing major university in the nation, with its advancements in academic excellence paralleling the phenomenal increase in enrollment. You will notice much new construction under way. This is material evidence of the growth of the past five years. But even more important than bricks and mortar, your presence at A&M is real, tangible evidence of our basic mission — to provide you the opportunity to obtain a quality education. I use this term because in the final analysis, each individual must set goals and objectives. Education has many facets. Academic achievement is the key element, but developing your full potential as a person is extremely important. This requires strict discipline in your study and in the budgeting of your time. It requires a sense of value and perspective. There are unlimited opportunities for development of this potential in all areas — leadership, extracurricular activities, cultural and social activities. Opportunities are yours for the seeking.

The rich heritage of Texas A&M stems from its students. I hope that each of you will become involved in the activities of the University and begin to make your contributions to its future achievements. To a very real extent, the future reputation of Texas A&M lies in your hands. This University offers great opportunity to those who will step forward and accept challenges and responsibilities. Your success at A&M will be what you make it, and it will depend largely upon your commitment to an education and in the amount of self-discipline you exercise during this important time in your life. The rewards for these efforts will be much greater than you might realize now. I want to assure you that the administration, faculty and staff of this University are committed to doing everything that we can to enable you to achieve success in your career as a student here and in the future as a graduate of Texas A&M University.

I look forward to a truly great year at A&M.

Sincerely yours,

Jarvis E. Miller

Another very big boot season is about to begin here and now with Selby's low-heeled, wide-calf walking boot and the corduroy tall heel boot. You know the flare that a stylishly sophisticated boot adds to all your looks---from skirts to trousers to skirts again. *62
