

Symposium, banquet to honor Tiger Teague

By SCOTT PENDLETON
Battalion Staff

The Teague National Science Symposium and "A Salute to Tiger Teague" dinner will take place Sept. 16 at Texas A&M University.

The symposium will be held from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. in Rudder Auditorium, Steve Pringle, assistant to the president's office, said.

"A very elite group of scientists," including the President's science advisor and the president of the National Science Board, will discuss national science policy, Pringle said.

The symposium is planned in conjunction with the dinner honoring congressman Olin E. Teague. The dinner will be held at 7 p.m. in Duncan dining hall.

The public is invited to attend the symposium. Tickets to the dinner cost $25.

About 600 tickets had been sold as of Tuesday, Pringle said. He expects sales to increase in the last two weeks before the dinner. About 1,200 people are expected to attend.

Leon Jaworski will be the master of ceremonies.

Speaking at the dinner is Texas A&M President Jarvis Miller, U.S. House of Representatives Majority Leader Jim Wright, former astronaut Joe Allen, and Oliver Meadows, former staff director of the Veterans Affairs Committee and immediate past president of the Disabled American Veterans.

Teague will be retiring from the U.S. House of Representatives early in January. He has represented Texas' 6th Congressional District since 1946.

He is currently chairman of the Science and Technology Committee, the one that authorized the legislation that began the space program.

A graduate of Texas A&M's class of '32, Teague was known for his support of veterans and of the space program.

Though it isn't official yet, both the House and Senate have laid the groundwork for renaming the Veterans' Hospital in Temple "The Olin E. Teague Veterans' Center."

Connally criticizes Carter's Rhodesian government stand

United Press International SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally ended a visit to southern Africa Wednesday by criticizing the Carter administration for what he described as siding with the Soviet Union against Rhodesia's beleaguered biracial interim government.

At a news conference before leaving Rhodesia after a 30-hour stay, Connally also said he does not intend to consider whether to seek the Republican presidential nomination until after congressional elections in November.

He denied news reports that his visit to southern Africa was financed by the South African Freedom Foundation, a conservative association of South African businessmen.

"I don't know who circulates these reports," he said. "Obviously people of ill will live all over the world. We paid our way. We came because we wanted to come. That's the end of it."

Asked how much the trip cost, he said: "That's none of your business. It's cost me several thousand dollars but that's my business."

"I don't know what that has to do with the mission but inevitably these days some members of the press are always extremely curious about dollars and cents. They apparently think that that has something to do with the motives of your trip and I find that very interesting."

Connally, on what he described as a private visit, said he met with Prime Minister Ian Smith and the three local black leaders who sit with Smith on the leadership of the government created by the "internal" majority rule agreement.

Britain and the United States, refusing to recognize the internal agreement, have been seeking to arrange negotiations between the government parties and the co-leaders of the guerrilla-backed Patriotic Front, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

"I must say that I'm disturbed a bit when I see not only the United States but the U.K. (United Kingdom) as well ostensibly supporting two out-of-country leaders, Nkomo and Mugabe, both of whom are being armed by the Soviets," Connally said.

"It is a paradox, it seems to me, that these days in which we live, that we find the United States and Great Britain and the Soviet Union all supporting the same individuals. It's not only a paradox but it's somewhat disturbing to me. Someone's wrong."

He said that even before visiting Rhodesia, he had the impression the interim government would have a hard time bringing an end to the war against black guerrillas "so long as the Soviets are supplying them arms and the United Kingdom and the United States are supporting them every other way, including economic sanctions against this country. So it makes it a pretty one-sided fight."

He said that through the "internal" agreement, Rhodesia has achieved what former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger tried to persuade Smith to accept in 1976.

"And yet, the United States, for some reason found itself in a position of being both silent and disapproving," he said. "I'm frankly at a loss to understand it."

Connally reiterated that Americans do not understand the problems of South Africa, the white ruled predominantly black country where he spent a week before flying to Rhodesia.

"Soweto," he said of the sprawling black township near Johannesburg, "is almost a generic term for poverty. And yet, when I look around the United States and some of the countries of the world, Soweto is so far superior to the living conditions of most people that we see around the world."

Connally said Americans do not understand that South Africa is a racially divided country because "we've had a recent experience that. It's not all that rare in the world, there are class divisions and distinctions."

"We've been through it for 10 years and we're still going through it."

He said he personally does not support apartheid, South Africa's system of institutionalized segregation.
