Corps biggest in 6 years

Texas A&M's 1978-79 Corps of Cadets is the largest in six years.

Corps members number 2,215, and the strength could increase in the next week or so, according to Col. James R. Woodall, commandant of the Corps.

The Texas Aggie military is at its largest since September 1972, when there were 2,227 men enlisted. It is almost 3 percent larger than 1977.

"We have about the same number of freshmen, in the range of 725," noted Lt. Col. Don Johnson, assistant to the Commandant.

The increase in Corps strength can be attributed to several factors, officials indicated. Chief among them is recruiting efforts during high school visits and Corps member recruitment at summer new student conferences. The Commandant's Office and Corps of Cadets joined forces in the effort.

Pets now getting vegetable diets

United Press International
NEW YORK — "Cats and dogs aren't eating as much meat as they used to," says Ruth Ann Manners, author of a recently published vegetarian cookbook. "When you buy food for pets these days it's often meat in name only. What you may get is a high proportion of hydrolyzed vegetable protein and soy flour, with little or no meat — only meat byproducts."

But the absence of real meat in these pet foods is not all bad, says Manners who, with her brother-in-law, William Manners, has written "The Quick and Easy Vegetarian Cookbook."

"The vegetable ingredients in pet foods, derived from soy beans, contain exactly the same high quality protein as meat, and at a fraction of the cost," she says. "Corn, barley and wheat are other good ingredients in these foods, and cats and dogs seem to thrive on them."
